O'S GOVERNOR IN CHICAGO.

owd at the First Regiment Armory—ed Says a Republican Is Not Much Better Than a Democrat.

cago, Oct. 29.—The special train car- Governor McKinley and the delega- of State Republicans reached Hyde at 6 o'clock, and after a half hour's the Governor was driven across the les to Fifty-fifth and Halstead ts, in the stockyard district, where mmense audience of laboring men assembled to give him greeting. REED IN ST. LOUIS.

Makes an Effective Speech to an Immense Audience.

Louis, Oct. 29.—The largest audi- that ever assembled in the expo- building greeted Hon. Thomas B. to-night. Even the stage, aisles and held their share of the 6,000 people nt. At 8 o'clock Mr. Reed was in- eed by Hon. Charles F. Joy. With- he usual introductory compliments to udience and the city the speaker ed in to a masterly arraignment of ocracy.

nong intelligent men," said Mr. "the sins of omission are worse thes ins of commission. For two the Democratic leaders, who are igent men, have had opportunities ulfill the promises they have been ng for 30 years and the net result is pread distress, silent machinery, men in idleness and business stagna- while the same Democratic lead- ave been chasing the butterflies of sible free trade. We are all deep- erested in the future of this coun- because it is our future. This na- of 70,000,000 intelligent people was in less intelligent than usual. This ht on a grievous wrong for which re now repenting in tears. I am ptimist, and view this calamity as le best. It is bound to bring about good. For these past two years eople have had plenty of time to do thinking. For 30 years Republican ers have been warning them what l happen if they allowed even a shadow of free trade to flit across the land, but they thought that they would try a change. They had seen the sun rise and set for 30 years, and they had good wages, which they thought must keep on, as did the sun. When a trolly car runs over a dog's tail the poor cur never needs another warning to look out for the car. The lesson is premanent to the dog, and so will it be to us. I can say nothing against the Democratic party, or I would be infringing on the speeches of the Democrats. I am admiring their leaders' magnificent silence. I don't thing a Democrat so much worse than a Republican, but a very small percent makes the difference between a business success and a business failure. I see on the New York State the great gathering of the clans for a decisive victory. People have seemed to think that prosperity was a result of the climate or soil, but now they realize it was the product of brains."

The only reference the speaker made to local politics was toward the close, when, referring to the O'Neill-Joy contested election case, he said he had seen the Republican majority of the Eleventh Missouri district disfranchised by a Democratic House of Representatives.

The address was punctuated with frequent applause. Mr. Reed's future tour in the West is not decided, and he will remain here to-morrow.

LEXOW COMMITTEE.

A Witness Who Was Very Indefinite in His Answers.

New York, Oct. 29.—The Lexow investigating committee resumed its session this morning. On resuming his place in the witness chair, Police Commissioner Sheehan said that when he went into partnership with Judge Brown he had no idea of being appointed police commissioner.

Returning to the trial of Capt. O'Connor, Mr. Sheehan was asked if he knew there was a complaint against that officer for assault made before he (Sheehan) was appointed commissioner, and he declared he knew absolutely nothing of it.

"Have you heard, commissioner," he said, "of any specific cases within the past two years of money being paid to the police for protection?"

"I may have read of such things in the newspapers."

"Now, was not the superintendent negligent in not putting down these abuses?"

"I will not pass an opinion on Superintendent Byrnes. Put him on the stand and examine him yourself."

"Do you believe there is corruption in the police department?" asked Mr. Goff.

"I believe there was corruption in the police department for the past 20 years."

When the proceedings were resumed after recess Commissioner Sheehan again took the stand.

The powers of the superintendent of police were again discussed. Mr. Goff read rule 24, which said that the superintendent was subject to the control and orders of the police board. "Is there any rule asking the superintendent to make reports to the board as to the reports inspectors make to him?"

"Yes, sir, there is such a rule, but it has not been lived up to."

"Now, you said to-day," said Chairman Lexow, "that the detective force was inefficient. Why did not you try the superintendent?"

"Well, I have only recently found that out, and we had no evidence against the superintendent to bring him to trial."

Mr. Goff tried in vain to get the witness to name any specific policeman who got money from pool room keepers. Commissioner Sheehan said he could not locate any particular policeman.

"Did you not state at the time that the superintendent of police was getting that money?"

"I think I have heard people say the money went there, but I expressed no opinion on the matter."

"Did you continue your line of investigation when you heard from rumor that the police were getting paid for protection, and that they money was going to the superintendent?"

"Yes, sir, I continued it, and tried to get as much information as I could."

"Did you send for Superintendent Byrnes?"

"No, sir. I would not insult him by asking him such a thing, unless I had proof."

"But you sent for the pool sellers; did you consider that just to hear reports from them?"

"I did, sir. I found no evidence at all against the superintendent."

Continuing, Commissioner Sheehan said he heard not only that the money went to the superintendent, but to the commissioners as well. That's the reason he did not believe it.

"Did you ever take any action regarding that?"

"I investigated the rumor, as I have already told you."

The rumor was that the money went to the police commissioners, as well as to the superintendent.

"You heard that, too," queried Mr. Goff.

"I knew it was an absolute lie so far as I was concerned, and therefore knew it was an absolute lie so far as Byrnes was concerned."

There was a little more cross questioning and crooked answering, and then Mr. Sheehan made this emphatic statement before an adjournment was taken till to-morrow.

"I could in no way, shape or form locate the payment of that money. I simply retained my own belief that it was paid."

Irish Political Prisoners.

Dublin, Oct. 29.—Mr. John Morley, secretary for Ireland, received to-day a deputation who had called on him to demand the release of the Irish political prisoners now confined in Irish and English prisons. Mr. Morley informed the deputation that the cabinet had decided that the law must take its course. He would not say that the Government would never release the prisoners, as the decision of the cabinet might be reconsidered.

The Smallpox Scare.

Washington, Oct. 29.—The Interior Department was again opened to the public to-day, after a two days' quarantine on account of the infection of smallpox therein. Every possible precaution has been taken to prevent the spread of the disease, and each room in the department has been thoroughly fumigated. In addition to this all the outgoing mail is disinfected and the whole clerical force has now been vaccinated. President Proctor of the civil service commission, returned to the city to-day, after a month's absence, and was immediately vaccinated.

CRIPPLE CREEK.

The Great Republican Rally Comes To-night.

M'INTIRE AND GOUDY TO SPEAK.

Another Arrest Made for the Victor Hold Up—A Personal Altercation at the Palace—The Mountain Monarch Strike Improves.

Special to The Gazette.

Cripple Creek, Oct. 29.—A very good illustration of how the Populists do not look after the wages of the workingman comes from Victor. At the last spring election of the district the Populist administration was victorious and ever since that time the town has been under Populist rule. Lately the town has been putting in a waterworks system and the Populist administration has cut down the wages of the men who are at work upon it from $3 to $2.50 per day. And yet the Populists profess to be the friends of the workingman. The above is only one small item showing what kind of friends they really are.

Judge Byron L. Carr, candidate for attorney general, is in this city and will remain in camp over to-morrow for the big Republican rally at which Mr. Frank Goudy and Governor-to-be McIntire will speak. A special train will go to meet these gentlemen, and special trains will travel to and from all the different points of the camp.

To-night the Republicans are holding a meeting at Victor, and Judge Carr and Senator Kennedy are addressing large audiences.

The rotunda of the Palace Hotel was the scene of a couple of unseemly squabbles to-night which happily did not result in anything worse than a bruised face and a broken head. The first trouble was at about 8 o'clock, when a well-known real estate man named Jack Martin made an attack upon S. M. Farris, striking him a blow in the face which he (Farris) claimed knocked him insensible. After a little while he revived and went home only to have his place taken by his son, Will Farris, who came upon the scene armed with a stout cane. Upon sighting Martin young Farris jumped on him and beat him over the head. The row commenced over the commission on a mining deal. A week or two ago Farris sold the City View lode to O. H. P. Baxter of Pueblo, and Martin claims that part of the commission is due him. Farris denies this, hence the trouble. All the parties to the disturbance have been arrested and the case will be heard to-morrow.

The mining item of the greatest importance reported to-day comes from the Mountain Monarch. It is to the effect that their ore chute has widened out to two feet, which will allow of greatly increased shipments in the near future. This refers to the Daly lease on the claim. A car of ore was sent from the property to-day.

Pete McCourt says that he will have the new mill in the McCourt district in running order by the first of next month, and also gives the pointer that she is a dandy. They have enough ore taken out to run the mill for 30 days.

The lessees on the Mattie W. are placing an engine and hoisting plant at the mine. The Mattie W. adjoins the Lawrence townsite and the lessees claim that the prospects are first-class.

The Moose shipped two car loads of ore to-day, and two cars also went out from the Dolly Varden.

Joel Winchester has sold his interest in the Cardinal to C. W. Steel and W. S. Stratton. The mine is now owned by the two latter gentlemen, with Messrs. Burke and Finn.

William Taylor, alias Johnnie Behind the Rock, was arrested Sunday evening. He is supposed to be one of the hold-ups at the Victor Hotel saloon some time since, for which Cannon and Short were arrested. He will have his hearing before Justice Mellen to-morrow morning.

Populists on Illinois State Ticket.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—The controversy as to claims of the rival labor parties nominations to a place on the official ballot under the heading of and in the same column with the State ticket of the People's party was decided to-day by the County Board of Review. The finding says in effect that the People's party having failed to poll the 2 per cent. of the total vote at the last general election could not under the law make nominations by convention. It was decided that the nominees of the Uhlich's hall and Bricklayer's hall conventions must go on the ballot by petition and under its own heading. The People's party State ticket will appear in a third column.

Killed the Marshal.

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 29.—S. A. Cameron, a prominent cotton buyer, and Congressman and E. F. Allison, a wealthy lumber merchant, got into a difficulty over a business transaction this morning and blows followed words. Town Marshal J. W. Thompson undertook to put a stop to the fight, when a pistol of one of the combatants went off and pierced his heart, killing him instantly. Several more shots followed, Cameron receiving a wound in the upper part of the body and Allison getting a bullet in the groin. It is thought both will die.

Destitution in Dakota.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Oct. 29.—W. J. Wagner, traveling agent for the Great Northern road has returned from a trip through the northern part of the State. That part of the country was severely stricken with drouth and the people there are in destitute circumstances. Mr. Wagner says that near Osceola and west of it whole townships were left by the sun and wind of the hot months as dry and barren as a desert and stock owned by the settlers was rendered worthless as there was no feed. One family was found eating horse flesh, as it was the only meat they could obtain.

Arrested for Libel.

Easton, Pa., Oct. 29. Congressman Howard Mutchler of the Eighth Congressional District of Pennsylvania, publisher of the Northampton Democrat and the Easton Daily Express, was arrested this evening and held in bail to answer the charge of criminal libel, by Alderman George H. Young on complaint of H. J. Reeder, Judge of the Northampton County court, a candidate for re-election on the Republican ticket. Mutchler in his newspapers of recent dates charges Judge Reeder with making promises to the keepers of disorderly houses and "speak-easies" in exchange for their pledges of support, and also of being in sympathy with the criminal classes and using his power as judge to indulge the criminals of the county to support his candidacy.

ILLEGAL BONDS.

They Were Issued by Pima County, Ariz. to Build a Railroad.

Washington, Oct. 29.—The issue of $200,000 of bonds made by Pima county, Ari., in aid of a construction of a narrow guage railroad in that county was declared to be void by the Supreme court of the United States to-day. The case came up on appeal by Charles Edmond Lewis from the judgment of the Supreme court of the territory which was to the effect that the bonds were illegally issued, although authorized by an act of the legislature in 1881. The legislature had no power to pass the law, however, said Justice Brown, in passing upon the case, for the reason that by act of Congress the county was prohibited from incurring any indebtedness, except for the administration of the internal affairs of the county. To aid in the construction of a railroad in the opinion of the court, he said, was not a part of such administration. The judgment of the Supreme court of Arizona was therefore affirmed.

THE COOK GANG.

An Important Arrest of Their Sympathizers

Wagoner, I. T., Oct. 29.—To-day Charles Beck, heading a posse of 21 Cherokee Indian police, made a most important capture in arresting Joe Johnson, Moses Price, Dick Reynolds, Jim Bates and Lou Perry, all white, who it is alleged, have harbored if not assisted the notorious Cook and Gordon gangs. Lou Perry was wanted for horse stealing. He was discovered about four or five miles east of Wagoner this morning about break of day. Perry on observing the police made haste to get out of the way on horseback. A chase began with the police in pursuit. A run of 15 miles was made. Perry pulling up at Moses Price's place, 11 miles southwest of Wagoner, on the Verdigris bottoms. At Price's house were found Lou Perry, Joe Johnson and Jim Bates, Moses Price and Dick Reynolds were arresting for harboring criminals, and it is alleged that three of the Cook gang ate dinner at Dick Reynolds's house Sunday. The importance of this capture can better be realized when it is considered that if the outlaws have no outside assistance it would only require a few days to capture them. Bill Cook, Skeeter and Cherokee Bill, were in Okmulgee Thursday, and were interviewed by a Fort Smith deputy marshal and a citizen of Okmulgee who were well acquainted with the outlaws, but the deputy marshal was not prepared just then to make an arrest.

Alive or Dead.

United States Marshal J. J. Cramp of Fort Smith, Ark., has issued the following circular:

"By authority of the Attorney-General of the United States I hereby offer a reward of $250 each for the bodies of the following named outlaws delivered to me, the reward payable on special approval of court, Deputy United States marshals cannot receive the reward: Bill Cook, Crawford Crosby, alias Cherokee Bill; Buck Wightman, alias Bitter Creek; Columbus Means, Skeeter, James French, Sam Brown, Perry Brewer, Thomas Quales, Joe Jennings, Charles Clifton, George Newton, Slaughter Kid, Bill Doolin. Reward to be accepted in full of all expenses so far as the government is concerned."

It will be seen that the deputy marshals are refused any benefit in the reward. This is considered to be an injustice to the deputy marshals, as they are not paid a salary but depend upon fees, and that it will also lessen the chances of a capture being made, as the deputy marshals will have no interest in the arrest of the outlaws.

Late Oriental News.

London, Oct. 29.—The Central News correspondent in Shanghai says it is rumored in Tien Tsin that the young Empress is dead, but the fact will not be announced nor mourning be worn by the court until after the birthday of the Dowager Empress.

The Central News correspondent in Tokio telegraphs: "It is not believed here that the Japanese will attack Port Arthur before the end of the week.

"Gen. Nodzu, who commands the advance force of the Japanese army, has abandoned the pursuit of the fugitives from Ku Lien Chao, as he does not wish to be burdened with more Chinese prisoners. The Japanese march upon Feng Huang Chang has begun."

The London correspondent of the Berlin Kreuz Zeitung had an interview with a Japanese attache here yesterday. The attache said he learned privately from friends acquainted with Manchuria that for a trained army campaigning in that region it would be easier in winter than in summer. The ice in Korea bay would not suffice to prevent the free movement of the Japanese warships.

The Ambassador Will Protest.

Washington, Oct. 29.—Secretary Gresham upon the receipts of the protest from the Secretary of Agriculture on Saturday, regarding the prohibition of American cattle to Germany, promptly directed Mr. Theodore Runyon, the United States ambassador at Berlin, to make representations to the German government stating that Texas fever could not be communicated by diseased cattle, so that even if the reported discovery of this disease were correct there would be no danger to German cattle; also that the meat of cattle affected with this disease had never been shown to be dangerous to the consumer. The ambassador was therefore instructed to protest against the action of the German government.

Political Libel Suits.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Oct. 29.—Suit was brought in the Circuit court to-day against C. E. Everett, chairman of the Republican County Central committee, by D. W. Souder, County Clerk, for damages for $10,000 for libelling the latter by the circulation of a pamphlet last week, alleging an overcharge of fees as County Clerk.

A similar suit will be instituted to-morrow by County Auditor A. F. Glutting.

QUITE DIFFERENT.

Affidavits That Do Not Agree With Patterson's Sensation.

AN INFORMAL CONFERENCE.

Blackmer, Howbert and Mangold Met the Miners at Their Request—Not a Word was Said About Politics—News Affidavits.

On Friday evening in this city Thomas M. Patterson, editor of The Rocky Mountain News, attorney for the Bull Hill plotters, and travelling orator for the Populist party, declared that at a meeting held in this city within 48 hours previous, the Republican candidates for District Judge and District Attorney and County Clerk Howbert, in conference with the representatives of the Bull hill miners told them that if they would vote the Republican ticket they would use their influence to get the bail bonds reduced and do what they could to get the prosecutions stopped.

On Sunday morning The Rocky Mountain News, of which Mr. Patterson is editor in chief, gave additional details, reasserting the principal allegations, charging that H. M. Blackmer, Ira Harris and Frank Howbert promised to work for a reduction of the bail bonds on condition of the miners voting the Republican ticket, but changing the place of holding the conference from Colorado Springs to Cripple Creek.

On Monday morning The News printed affidavits by C. B. Flynn and Frank Wolfe of the Altman Miners' union declaring that they met H. M. Blackmer, Frank Howbert and Fred Mangold at Cripple Creek and conversed with them about the unfortunate situation of affairs in this county and whether anything could be done to bring about a better feeling. According to the affidavits, no mention was made of political matters on either side.

What Mr. Patterson said here on Thursday evening, what The News said on Sunday morning, and the affidavits printed on Monday differ in important and essential features. Mr. Patterson stands convicted of gross exaggeration and malicious misstatement by his own journal.

With one or two more attempts and some more changes The News may get at the truth of the informal conference held at Cripple Creek at the request of the miners, and the "startling" sensation of The News will be whittled down to the facts.

It is to the interest of Mr. Patterson as a lawyer and as a politician to exaggerate the ill will which exists on Bull hill and to misrepresent the feeling in this city towards the miners. It is the interest of everyone in this county that no ill will should exist. It is unfortunately true that a mistaken idea prevails in Cripple Creek district as to the attitude of the District court, the sheriff's office and the people of Colorado Springs towards the miners; it is true also that some people in Colorado Springs are too much inclined to judge all the miners by a few desperate and criminal ones. Any man who would refuse an opportunity of doing anything or saying anything to lessen prejudice and dissipate hatred, would be unworthy of public office. What Mr. Patterson criticises has been boiled down to an action not only innocent but eminently praiseworthy, and in striking contrast to Patterson's own course in doing all in his power, without any regard to the truth, to foster enmity and hatred.

The following affidavits are reprinted from The News:

"State of Colorado, County of El Paso.

"C. B. Flynn and Frank Wolfe being by me first duly sworn, each for himself, and not one for the other, deposes and says that our attention has been called to certain charges made by Thomas M. Patterson in a speech by him made at Colorado Springs, Thursday, Oct. 25, 1894, in reference to a conference between C. B. Flynn, recording secretary of the Miners' union; Frank Wolfe, financial secretary, and Andrew Short, David Foley and M. J. Layden, representing the Miners' union of Cripple Creek mining district on the one part and Frank Howbert, County Clerk of El Paso county; Henry M. Blackmer, candidate for District Attorney, and Fred Mangold, ex-under sheriff of El Paso county, on the other part, which has been denied by said Frank Howbert, Henry M. Blackmer and Judge Ira Harris. That the people of the State of Colorado may know the exact facts in reference to what did occur at said interview, this affidavit is made."

"C. B. Flynn for himself alone, states that on Sunday, Oct. 21, 1894, at about 2 o'clock p. m. of said day, at the Palace hotel, in Cripple Creek, he met said Mr. Mangold and Henry M. Blackmer, spoke of the killing of James Cannon by Deputy Sheriff Sterling, and asked the feeling on Bull hill. I then stated that the men, in my opinion, were exceptionally quiet under the circumstances. I was then asked if I would not get a body of men from Altman to confer with Colorado Springs parties in reference to getting a better feeling. I replied that it was what the miners desired, and that even now the sheriff could go to Altman for a criminal as safely as at any other part of the county. I further stated to them that I would not take the responsibility to act for the miners, but that if they would like to meet a representative body of miners I would send for them. They both expressed a desire to meet such a body. I then telephoned to Frank Wolfe, asking him to bring the committee down. Mr. Mangold and Mr. Blackmer, in company with Judge Harris and Frank Howbert, went up stairs to some room in the Palace hotel.

"Affiants jointly say the committee of miners some time after this arrived at the hotel and waited in the rotunda of the hotel for about half an hour, when Mr. Mangold, Mr. Blackmer, Mr. Howbert and Judge Harris came down stairs and the committee of miners above named, with Mr. Blackmer, Mr. Mangold and Mr. Howbert, went up stairs to room 32 in the Palace hotel.

"After reaching the room Mr. Blackmer stated, in substance that he wished to harmonize the people of Colorado Springs and the miners of Cripple Creek district, and that he would use his influence to that end. He then asked the committee what they thought would be the best means to bring about this result. Mr. Wolfe answered him that it was entirely in the hands of the people of Colorado Springs; that all the miners asked for was fair and impartial treatment at their hands; that the miners considered that the miners in jail at Colorado Springs were held there under exhorbitant bonds, the most of them being held by informations filed by the District Attorney. There was a general conversation between the committee on behalf of the miners and Mr. Blackmer, Mr. Howbert and Mr. Mangold, in which the gentleman last named said in substance that they would use their influence to have all the bonds reduced to $1,000 for each man in jail, irrespective of the number of indictments against each man, if it lay in their power to do so, and they thought beyond any doubt they could accomplish this.

"C. B. Flynn, on behalf of himself, further says that immediately after this interview he met Judge Ira Harris, candidate for Judge of the District Court, at the Palace drug store immediately across from the hotel, where the foregoing interview was held, and said to him: 'Well, Judge Harris, we met the committee and they agreed to use their influence to get all the men in the Colorado Springs jail cut on bail in the sum of $1,000 each, irrespective of the number of indictments against each.'

"Judge Harris said he was glad to hear it and approved of it, and hoped that by reason of this the differences would be settled.

"Frank Wolfe, on behalf of himself, further says that on Wednesday, the 24th day of Otober, 1894, he was at Colorado Springs and there met Mr. Blackmer. This was about 1 p. m. Mr. Blackmer took me to Mr. Rockwell's office, the Assistant District Attorney. Mr. Rockwell stated that he was busy and would like to see me at 3:30. About 2 p. m. I again met Mr. Blackmer and he said it was not necessary to go to Mr. Rockwell's office as Judge Campbell had already reduced the bonds, and further affiants saith not.

BACK FROM EUROPE.

Secretary of Agriculture Morton is Again at Work.

Washington, Oct. 29. Secretary Morton was at his desk this morning at 8 o'clock, it being his first appearance since his return from Europe. He found an immense mass of stuff awaiting him, and at once plunged into business. He will not go to Nebraska for the election. Referring to the German prohibition of the importation of American cattle, Mr. Morton said the matter was of such recent occurrence that he could not talk about it until he had examined the subject. The prohibition which had been imposed by Belgium, he thought, would be of but short duration, for on the 11th of this month, Minister Ewing at Brussels and Consul G. W. Roosevelt told him that such were the indications, the prohibition having put up the price of meat in Brussels to such an extent that the people were protesting. The cause for this action on the part of the authorities was said to be the discovery of pleuro-pneumonia in American cattle.

"Secretary Rusk in March, 1892," said Mr. Morton, "issued a proclamation that pleuro-pneumonia had been stamped out and there has never been a case since then.

"Concerning the German prohibition," continued Mr. Morton, "I will say that the American packing interests that control the dressed meat output, beef, pork and mutton, ought to organize a corporation and put afloat a squadron of refrigerator ships, if necessary, and send nothing to Europe but our dressed meat, all of which bears the inspection stamp of the Government. Then there could be no charge that the meat was diseased, and there would be more profit in the work for the packers. I found people in England who said they preferred to have the meat shipped in on the hoof so that the poor could get the offal as they call it, which was so cheap that they could afford to buy it. It would be vastly better for these people, if, through a reduction of freight, they were enabled to buy good dressed meat instead of the offal of live animals. The advantages in shipping only dressed meat are manifest. We would thereby retain the offal here, which is useful in enriching the soil. The packer would also secure a more compact bulk, an enhanced value to his product in its entirety, and a reduced cost of transportation, three items that would enable him to sell his product at a lower cost. I expect to be able to show in my next annual report the number of live animals we have shipped to Europe and our proportion of all the live animals imported into Great Britain. The fact of the matter is that we have increased our trade in that direction enormously, and have supplanted many of the large dealers in Great Britain."

Mr. Morton said that he learned a number of things from the Agricultural Department of Great Britain that suggested lines of inquiry that may be taken up in this country.

He spoke pleasantly of the dinner at which Mr. Wilson made his famous speech, and said only the British part of it was cabled to America, while the American part was expunged. Mr. Morton declared that it was an American speech and opened the eyes of the British to the way we were encroaching upon their markets throughout the world.

Paris, Oct. 29.—There was a stormy debate in the Chamber of Deputies to-day over the accounts of M. Fayette, a high official in the Ministry of Commerce.

In the accounts were included bills for dinners at Voisin's on 640 occasions, and for six cabs, each for the use of Deputy Guerin and Senator Lourtes.

Premier Dupuy admitted that these bills were irregular, but thought that there was no circumstances connected with them that would justify the prosecution of the offenders.

M. Jaures, however, demanded that the persons contracting these bills be prosecuted.

M. Guerin challenged the Government to prosecute him, declaring that he had been guilty of no misconduct.

The Chamber approved M. Jaures' demand.

VON CAPRIVI.

HIS RESIGNATION STILL REMAINS A MYSTERY.

It Was Sudden and Unexpected—German Newspaper Comment on the Chancellor and His Work—His Successor's Task—The Socialist Congress.

Berlin, Oct. 29.—The dramatic collapse of the Ministry has been followed by such a scurrying to and fro as the capital has not seen before since Bismarck fell. Every train brings to the city politicians whose parties are affected most vitally by the change or whose influence is needed in the construction of the government. Several federal envoys left town yesterday morning under the impression that Thursday conference had smoothed away all threatening difficulties, but they are returning now. All are astounded and perplexed by the sudden dismissal of the Chancellor, for to most of the officials behind the scenes it came as unexpectedly as to the public at large.

Several facts proving the suddenness of the crisis have transpired to-day. It has been ascertained that the Emperor on Thursday evening congratulated Count Von Caprivi upon his success in obtaining for his support a majority of the federal conference. In the same audience the Emperor approved the Chancellor's policy of mild repression of the socialists. The report that on Oct. 23 Caprivi already thought of resigning was true only to this extent: He intimated to the Emperor on that day that he would resign in case he should not get a majority of the federal envoys to support him in the conference. The report that the Emperor censured Caprivi for an article which the Kocinische Zeitung launched against the Prussian government, is without foundation and was discredited from the first in official circles where it was known, that upon his return from Lieberburg, the Emperor greeted the Chancellor most cordially. When the whole story shall become known, it will probably be shown that Caprivi insisted upon resigning against the Emperor's will. He is known to have expressed his unwillingness to present Dr. Miquel's new financial proposals in the Reichstag and to have told the Emperor that with another Chancellor, Miquel would have freer hand to accede to the demands of the federal States. The Emperor heard impatiently this suggestion to re-form his Cabinet. He eventually offered to dismiss Count Botho zu Eulenburg, Prussian Premier, and the Chancellor's most vigorous opponent, but Caprivi still requested that he be allowed to retire.

The Vossiche Zeitung, the most influential Radical daily in Berlin, says to-day in a flattering leader concering the ex-Chancellor: "Count Von Caprivi will be glad doubtless to be rid of the burden of a thankless office. He has fallen in a combat for a good cause. What is in store for his successor the future alone can disclose. Germany must expect to be confronted with prolonged dangers and much political confusion."

The Neueste Nachrichten, a bitter Bismarckian daily, passes this comment:

"After the triumphal fanfares over the success of his policy and the success of the conference, Count Von Caprivi's downfall certainly was a surprise. Probably the Emperor at last recognized the fact that Caprivi was not a person fitted for the great task awaiting the chief Minister of State; that he was not equal to reuniting the offices of German Chancellor and Prussian Prime Minister in the manner required by a safe, energetic and unwavering policy."

The Tageblatt, Radical, says: "It was Count Von Caprivi's weakness that he succeeded to a political inheritance without claiming for himself the benefits accruing from the same. He was thus often placed in a false position through having measures forced upon him by circumstances. He thus estranged many who were ready to support him, while he failed to conciliate his adversaries. For the same reason his policy seemed also half-hearted and wavering. To this lack of direct and positive force he finally succumbed."

The National Zeitung, National Liberal, says: "Of late years experience has finally condemned the separation of the Prussian Premiership and the Imperial Chancellorship. Count Von Caprivi's administration led to the bewilderment of State affairs. The official press never knew exactly in what direction it was tending or whether it was really doing service in the name of the Chancellor. The result was often an anarchic situation as ought never to exist under a government knowing its own position and prepared to defend it. Whoever the next Chancellor may be he will succeed "cum beneficio inventarii." He will be able to advocate measures without hearing the taunt that he has confused all proceedings a taunt often heard in the last months."

The Boersin Courier, Radical Unionist, pays the ex-Chancellor this tribute of respect: "Chancellor Von Caprivi goes as he came, without being richer by a single account, but he is richer in the respect which he has gained from the political world than the most sanguine would ever have dared to hope for Bismarck's successor."

The Boersen Zeitung contains this venomous paragraph: "Hand in hand with his tendencies to the extreme left went measures which the representatives of Germany's economical life opposed strongly. The Emperor now will continue the glorious traditions of the Bismarck regime. Caprivi's withdrawal will not injure in any way Germany's influence abroad."

The Hamburger Nachrichten, Bismarck's mouthpiece, is silent.

The Emperor's prolonged conferences with Prince Hohenlohe, General Count Von Waldersee and Dr. Miquel, kept the excitement here at fever heat. At 2 o'clock this afternoon it was announced that Prince Hohenlohe had waived his objections on account of age and had consented to accept the Chancellorship and Prussian Premiership. Baron Koeller's appointment to be Prussian Minister of the Interior was made known at the same time.

The Reichsanzeitung remains silent concerning the resignations.

The social Democratic congress at Frankfort has closed after passing resolutions against piece-work and in favor of energetic agitation for women's rights. The next congress is to be held in Breslau under the management of the present executive committee. The delegates closed their work by giving three cheers for the Social Democracy and singing the workingmen's "Marseillaise."

Prince Bismarck is expected to leave Varzin so as to arrive in Friedrichsruhe on Nov. 2. Great preparations are making for his reception.

The Kladderdatsch's scandalous attacks upon Freiherr Von Kidderlen Waechter and Herr Von Holstein last winter have been recalled by Freiherr Von Marschal Von Bieberstein's suit against Mr. Kleser, owner of the West Deutsche Allegemeine Zeitung in Cologne, and Editor Nessler of Nuremberg. These gentlemen are supposed to be responsible for the statement that the Foreign Secretary inspired the attacks in question. The defendants say they can prove their statements and propose to call Count Von Caprivi to testify. The trial will take place in Cologne on Nov. 29. It is expected to be sensational.

C. R. Breckinridge, United States Ambassador to Russia, started with his family on Thursday for Koenigsburg, where he rested over night before proceeding to St. Petersburg.

Baron Ketteller of the German Embassy in Washington is here.

WAITE IN CHICAGO.

He Is Nominated for Populist President in 1896.

Denver, Oct 29.—A special to The Republican says: To-day was Populist day in Chicago, and the members of the People's party turned out to welcome and to do honor to Governor Waite of Colorado. The Governor's coming had not been extensively advertised; but the programme which was mapped out by the People's Party County Central committee was carried out without a hitch, and the Governor certainly has occasion to feel flattered at the rousing reception he received. The Populists are jubilant at the good impression the Governor made on the thousands of thinking people who heard him speak to-day and to-night, and the leaders now feel confident that the Populist vote in Chicago and Cook county alone will reach 50,000.

The preparations made to receive the Governor were carried out as follows: This morning at 8 o'clock the various ward and marching clubs formed on Fifth avenue in front of People's Party headquarters and marched in a body to the Rock Island train to meet the Governor, who arrived at 9 o'clock, and escort him to the Grand Pacific hotel. At the hotel the Governor and the Populists held a love feast. It is estimated that 1000 people crowded into the hotel corridors and fought for the privilege of shaking his hand. Afterwards the Governor was driven to the home of Hon. John Z. White, the Populist candidate for Congress in the Second district, where he rested to prepare for his speech on the Lake Front.

At 2 p. m., an hour before the Governor was to speak, several thousand people had gathered near the Columbus statue, on the Lake Front park, and at 3 o'clock when the Governor appeared, the crowd extended to the sidewalk in front of the Auditorium hotel. There was fully 10,000 people present.

The Governor was in good physical health, and his voice was as clear as a speaker could wish for. The people of Chicago didn't expect to find an orator in Governor Waite, and they were surprised when they heard what he had to say and how he said it. His voice was so resonant to-day that each syllable he spoke on the Lake Front could be heard distinctly on the steps of the Auditorium hotel. He could be heard always except when the Illinois Central engines within a stone's throw of him kept up a continuous whistling when passing the park. This outrageous noise by this railroad monopoly was enough to confuse an ordinary mortal, but the Governor took no notice of the screeching and patiently waited each time for the noise to cease.

The talk delivered to-day was an entertaining one and the large audience at no time showed signs of weariness. The Chicago press will not say so to-morrow morning, as it was learned to-day that the newspaper men sent to write up the gathering had been instructed to belittle the affair and to criticise the speaker, but such partisanship will not convince the thousands who heard the Governor speak that the meeting was not an enthusiastic and a vote-getting one.

The Governor after referring to Chicago as the metropolis of the Western continent, said in part:

"You people here in Illinois are fighting the battle along the same line we have pursued in Colorado. Illinois is the great central State and the Populists of the country are looking this way for magnificent results on election day, and as I now see it, Illinois is destined to be one of the great Populist States of the Union. We are now on the eve of a political revolution. This revolution we hope may be accomplished by the peaceful aid of the ballot. At any rate, it must be accomplished. The situation which confronts the country to-day with 60,000,000 of people is deplorable, as it finds 5,000,000 of the number out of work and the rest beginning the winter season with dismal prospects.

"Never has our country been so far from the ideal of our forefathers as it is to-day, and never were workingmen ground down so hard by the power of wealth and concentrated monopoly. What is the cause? Is it because of the new tariff? No, for the new is slightly better than the old. Is it because the Republicans and Democrats have changed places? It can't be that, for there is no difference between the Democratic and Republican parties. They are the same, both controlled by monopoly and selfish interest. The Republican party has only one excuse for existence, and that is that it settled the first great labor question that ever arose in this country. And since that question has been settled and the negro is no longer a slave, it really has no excuse for further existence. The Democratic party, on the other hand, hasn't even an historic claim on which to base a right of existence. Its record has been a party of opposition and selfishness. The trouble is there are no real statesmen at Washington representing either of the old parties.

"The time has come when all friends of the common people must wipe out the two parties that have passed their usefulness. Great questions have come up at Washington for the representatives of the two great parties to solve, but there were no statesmen there to do the solving in the interest of the people. During the last 20 years Congress has passed no law in the interest of the people, except the pension bill, and Grover Cleveland, during his first term, sat up nights for six months on purpose to think how he could best veto the bill. O, verily, Grover is not a friend of the people, and he is not a statesman. His narrow-mindedness and smallness of his nature have been demonstrated during the last few days. Oh, that there were a statesman, a statesman that all the word implies in the White House, a statesman and a man.

"And the financial question. How the two parties have juggled with it. When the question regarding the issue of bonds came up the Republicans were afraid to issue, but the Democrats, flushed with success when in power, issued them and placed the country on a gold basis. Some people call us selfish for standing out for silver, but we are not. We work for the interest of all. By decreasing the amount of currency people are made poorer. Increase the circulation of silver and it acts the other way. Silver is a necessity to increase the volume of circulating medium. It is necessary also that the circulating medium should have some basis in value. That is that more government notes would not furnish a sufficiently staple circulating medium. We don't want cheap money. We want a circulating medium sufficiently expanded to meet the demands of our ever increasing commerce, and we would not debase the money of the country by simply putting silver in its proper place alongside of gold. The scarcity of money causes business failures. With lots of money in circulation the condition of affairs would be staple and certain.

"But nothing looking toward that will be done by the present Congress. I repeat it again, a statesman is needed there. The present Congress is subservient to the Eastern money power. The only hope of the common people is by concentrated action on their part at the ballot box in defense of those rights which the Constitution intended to guarantee to them, but of which they have been systematically robbed. The time has come when the rights and dignity of the laboring man must be maintained. The laboring man can never hope to be out of bondage so long as the present Congress or anything like it exist. Combines must be fought with combines, and the common people, the backbone of this nation, should unite and use its strength and make the nation as great as it should be."

In the evening Governor Waite was escorted by a brass band to the hall where he was to speak. About 6000 people had gathered to hear him, and there were loud cries of "Waite! Waite! Waite! For 1896."

The Governor was given a rousing reception as he advanced to begin his address, and it was some time before he was allowed to proceed. His speech, which was an elaboration of his talk of the afternoon consisted chiefly in censure of the Democratic and Republican parties and arguments to show the welfare of the people demands that the government be intrusted to the Populists.

At the conclusion of his speech, which was greeted with great applause, Governor Waite was escorted back to his hotel by a cheering crowd of fully 1000 people.

A NEW RAILROAD.

The Burlington's Through Line to the Pacific Coast.

Omaha, Oct. 29.—To-day the Burlington began the regular running of trains to Billings, Mont., and by way of the Northern Pacific to Helena, Spokane, Butte, Seattle, Tacoma and Portland, and all other northern Idaho, Montana and Puget Sound points, thereby giving to the railroad world another transcontinental line which will play no inconsequential part in the matter of freight and passenger traffic of the future. There was considerable of a crowd of people at the Union depot to see the train and the people who would make the first regular run over the new extension of the Burlington from Sheridan, Wyo., to Billings, Mont., a distance of 141 miles, which has been constructed this year, the construction gang laying on an average a mile and a half of track a day. The building of this line is of incalculable benefit to Omaha, Kansas City, St. Louis, Chicago, bringing a territory of some 1500 miles in extent almost to the doors of these cities. It is a short line between Omaha and Helena by 295 miles; Omaha and Butte by 725 miles; Omaha and Spokane by 59 miles; Omaha and Tacoma by 55 miles; Kansas City and Helena by 335 miles; Kansas City and Butte by 315 miles; Kansas City and Spokane by 474 miles, the mileage to these points being equally shortened for St. Louis.

The country to the northwest has been almost a sealed book to the jobbing and wholesale interests of the big cities along the Missouri, as well as Illinois and the more remote East. St. Paul and Minneapolis have enjoyed a monopoly of this territory now for the first time brought into civilization.

The train which left to-day at 4:30 p. m. is carded for very fast time, scheduled to make the distance between Omaha and Billings, 893 miles, in 29 hours, or nearly 31 miles an hour, which through the Black Hills country, the route traversed by the Burlington, is regarded as exceedingly fast running. Passengers leaving Omaha at 4:30 p. m. will arrive in Billings the following evening at 9:45 p. m., making close connections with the Northern Pacific for the Sound country. The road traverses the entire length of the Crow reseration and permission of the United States government had to be obtained as well as the consent of the Crow chiefs before the work of building the road was begun, and no more interested lot of people could be found than the Crows were during the progress of the grading and laying of the track and when the first train rushed through the Crow country the red man woke up to realize that the time is not far distant when the white man will be asking Congress to throw open the Crow reservation to white settlement.

The new short line opens for settlement hundreds of thousands of acres of land which need only water to make them prolific. Already irrigation ditches have been put in in anticipation of the coming farmers and planters and a scheme is now ready for the irrigation of a much greater body of land which will add to the tillable land of the United States enough farming property to start a new empire in the Northwest. The road runs through a country rich in coal and other minerals, and through the greatest cattle grazing section of the United States. Hundreds of thousands of head of cattle grow fat on the "blue stem" grass which grows in abundance on the plains and in the valleys. The line passes through the valleys of the Little and Big Goose creeks, the Tongue river, the Little Big Horn where Custer made his last stand against the Sioux, across and down the Big Horn to the valley of the Yellowstone, which is brought almost into the back yard of Missouri river trade on account of shortening up the distance.

And to-day the new line which is to become a large factor in the commerce of the Missouri and Mississippi valleys was inaugurated without any flourish of trumpets. Three hundred passengers were aboard the train, including several minor officials.

A POPULIST CLIMAX.

The Denver Sabbath Breakers Sang the Doxology.

Denver, Oct. 29.—Last night's Populist meeting at the Coliseum capped the climax for novelties. The audience, or as many of them as knew the words, sang the doxology. At the close of a long and earnest speech by William J. Kerr, in which that gentleman had quoted much Scripture and called upon the deity for aid in the coming election, he created something of a sensation by requesting the audience to join him in singing the doxology. At first the crowd thought it was a joke, but Commissioner Buchanan of the Board of Public Works showed them the proposition was in earnest and he himself sang loudly. With his big walking stick for a baton, the Commissioner started out as second to Kerr in the hymn, and the big crowd joined in.

Following this came another unusual scene. A telegram was received from Chicago, addressed to Land Registrar Childs. It read: "Governor Waite addressed an audience of 20,000 at an open air meeting this afternoon. He is now speaking to 10,000 in Palace hall. Enthusiasm is unbounded and Populists will carry Chicago this fall. Waite is our candidate for President in '96."

J. W. Dean read this telegram, and as he read it the great crowd was silent. When, however, he reached its termination, referring, as it did to the national election, there was a yell, and hats went into the air. One long whiskered bespectacled and patriarchal looking old man, who for a week has advertised himself widely by scattering Populist literature up and down Sixteenth street, jumped upon the platform and encouraged the audience to even louder cheering, if that were necessary or possible. Men stood on their chairs and swung their hats, while women waved their kerchiefs in their zeal for Waite.

Kerr's speech was upon regular Populist lines excepting that he declared Senator Teller to be one of his own party. "There is not a better Populist in Colorado or the United States to-night than Henry M. Teller," he said. "There was a time this summer, when, if half a dozen of us could have got around him, we would have pulled him clean over the barriers which keep him from leading our party. But he was alone or with his nearest friends, and he did not take the step. He had not the courage of H. N. Stevens or he would be with us to-day, for his words, his convictions and his declarations are all Populist to the very core.

"How about Wolcott? somebody asks me. Well, Ed Wolcott is right where he is. He has not brains enough to get out of the rut he fell into and, what is more, he will never get them. We want a man with brains to work alongside Teller and those other men who are for silver, and we mean to send one in Wolcott's place, mark me."

BEARS IN ALASKA.

MORE FEROCIOUS THAN THEIR GRIZZLY COUSINS NOW ARE.

The Brown Bear of Alaska Weighs From 800 to 1,500 Pounds—He Is an Expert Fisher and a Good Roadmaker—Accounts of Thrilling Encounters.

The northern side of the Kenai peninsula, bordering the shores of Cook's inlet, Kodiak island, and the Alaskan peninsula as far westward as Unimak island, is the habitat of the Alaskan brown bear (Ursus richardsonii), a huge, shaggy animal, varying in length from 6 to 12 feet and weighing from 800 to 1,500 pounds. This bear possesses all the courage and fierceness of his southern cousin, the grizzly, and he has been hunted so little as yet that he is absolutely fearless of man and is an exceedingly dangerous adversary.

Being an expert fisher, the bear frequents, during the salmon season, all the rivers emptying into Bering sea and the north Pacific and their tributaries as far as the fish go. After the salmon run is over the animal retreats into the recesses of the hills, where berries and small game are plentiful.

The brown bear is the great roadmaker of this part of Alaska. Not only are the banks of the streams trodden into good trails by the huge, lumbering brutes, but the swampy plains are crossed in every direction by paths leading to the hills. The traveler will do well to follow them in journeying across the country, as they invariably lead to the best fording places of streams and form the easiest routes to the hills. The northern limit of the brown bear's habitat is as yet undetermined, but I have seen them in the interior as far as latitude 67 degrees, and they probably range still farther.

My first encounter with one of these animals was a startling experience for me, and, I have always thought, equally so for the bear. We had been working up against the strong current of the Koowak river all day, and toward nightfall pitched our tent at the base of a high bluff forming the right bank of the stream. While supper was being prepared I climbed the bluff to get a look at the country and was walking leisurely along with my gun carelessly held in my left hand.

The top of the bluff was densely covered almost to the edge with spruce and alders, and the undergrowth was so thick that it was impossible to see more than a few feet through it. Ahead of me a cluster of rocks offered a temporary place to sit down and enjoy the view, and I made for it.

Just as I reached the nearest rock a tremendous shaggy animal arose apparently from under my feet, and I immediately recognized in him the brown bear, of whose fierceness the natives had been telling me for weeks. My first instinct was to shoot, and I probably would have done so had my gun been in my right hand, but the first motion I made the bear reared on his haunches and was so formidable looking that I concluded to wait and see what he intended doing. After a moment's hesitation, during which he turned his head from side to side and licked his chops in a most suggestive fashion, he dropped on all fours, and with wonderful quickness turned and sprang out of sight in the dense undergrowth.

When I returned to camp and related my experience, Tah-tah-rok, my native guide, assured me that the bear must have recently concluded a heavy meal, as otherwise he would have attacked me.

The mainland of Alaska adjacent to the island of Unga is full of brown bear, and, although somewhat smaller than those found on the west side of Cook's inlet, they are sufficiently fierce and aggressive. Some officers from one of the vessels of the Bering sea fleet went ashore at Herendeen bay during the summer of 1891 on a deer hunt and one of the party saw a bear about 100 yards distant eating berries. Without a thought of the consequences he raised his gun and fired at the animal. The shot went wide of the mark, but at the report of the gun the bear started for the hunter on a dead run. His charge was met by a shower of bullets from the officer's repeater, but although badly wounded the infuriated brute did not hesitate an instant, but rushed straight at his enemy. When within about 10 feet of the hunter, the bear rose on his haunches and prepared to close. Blood was pouring in streams down his body. One bullet had shattered his upper jaw, but he was still so full of fight that the outcome of the struggle would have been extremely doubtful had not another of the party arrived and ended the fight by shooting the brute through the brain.

An examination of the bear's body showed that it had been struck six times. Three of the shots were in parts of the body ordinarily considered vital and would doubtless have caused death but the vitality of these animals is almost incredible, instances having been cited of their running over 100 yards after being shot through the heart.

One of the best places in Alaska to find the brown bear is in the vicinity of Portage bay, 10 or 12 miles across Unga strait from Sand point. Last summer, while I was at Sand point, two hunters came in after an absence of little over a month in the vicinity of Portage bay and reported having killed 33 bears. One day they killed seven. In order to show that they were not spinning hunters' yarns, they brought the skins with them and sold them at the trading point at Sand point.

In dealing with the Alaska brown bear a hunter should never go alone. A companion is almost as essential as a gun. If possible, a man well acquainted with the peculiar habits of this animal should be engaged to act as guide. Good bear dogs would be of great assistance, but would have to be brought into the country by the hunter, as there are very few dogs here. There are no trees as far west as Portage bay, and the hunter must be exceedingly careful how he enters the heavy thickets which cover the river bottoms, as the bears favor this kind of ground, and if aroused or wounded will unhesitatingly attack.

During the summer of 1891 two prospectors were looking for coal lands near Port Moller, and about a mile from the shore they came upon an immense brown bear engaged in catching salmon from a small stream. One of the prospectors immediately opened fire and evidently wounded the brute badly. But it got out of sight in the thick brush. Being anxious to secure the skin, the two men started to follow the wounded animal. They had not gone a dozen steps before the enraged and wounded brute turned on them, and before either one could fire a shot seized one man by the leg and bit it nearly off and then sprang on his companion and knocked him senseless with a blow of his terrible paw. Having, as he thought, finished his enemies, the bear quietly ambled off and was subsequently found dead a few hundred yards from the scene of battle. Cor. Seattle Telegraph.

About two years ago Mrs. Theodore A. Havemeyer had her portrait painted. She wore for the event a magnificent white and gold toilet, which she had made for a grand ball. While not strictly a beautiful woman, Mrs. Havemeyer has rather a distinguished air and looks quite the grande dame.

Miss Virginia Fair has a fad for fans. She owns the largest and most expensive private collection. They are all for use, too, and match her costumes, of which she has hundreds every year. Miss Fair did not set out with the idea of making a collection of fans, but the number has increased until she has come to have a justifiable pride in them.

A wheel has been invented by an English cyclist which has a 120 gear, as easy to work as a 64. Next, please!

The beauty of a cycle is perishable as that of a woman, and fashions in cycles are as changeable as women's dress.

In England there is a company in which wheels can be insured against damage by collision and damage caused by third parties.

The more the diamond is cut the brighter it sparkles, but the more a cycle gets polished in the shops the weaker becomes the tube.

Sixty inches will be found to be the best all around gear. It does not cause one's feet to travel too fast down hill nor put too great a strain on the rider up hill.

A woman who has tried to learn to ride a bicycle without any assistance declares that to do so successfully requires "the patience of Job, the persistence of the pilgrim fathers and the martyrdom of Joan of Arc." Sporting Life.

THE DEACON.

The pastor of the Wilberforce Memorial church, Birmingham, England, Rev. Peter Stanford, is a negro who was born in slavery.

The Congregationalists of Massachusetts have adopted a plan for bringing together churches without pastors and pastors without churches.

General Booth of the Salvation Army and his captains of either sex have been officially declared to be ministers of religion within the meaning of the law.

At the age of 73 years Bishop William Taylor is as zealous as ever in the work of evangelizing Africa, though many of his best men have died or been compelled to return.

Rev. Father Peter Havermans of Troy, N. Y., has been a priest for 61 years and for 51 years has been pastor of St. Mary's church in that city, which he built and in which he still celebrates mass every Sunday.

A PALE GRAY DONKEY OF DAMASCUS.

Scenting a well-filled manger of corn and oats, slipped his halter to roam over the arid desert, where he found among the hot sands and burning rocks a scanty crop of thistles; and on the third day he perished.

The moral of this is: Don't be a pale gray donkey.

Don't wander away from home without going over the ever popular Santa Fe Route.

The Santa Fe has lines in fifteen States and Territories. It always gets there carefully and on time, considering all things, is cheaper than other roads.

Don't persuade yourself that any other way is satisfactory; especially if figuring on a trip to Chicago and East. The Santa Fe is the shortest line by thirty miles between Kansas City and Chicago, and has few crossings at grade. Its vestibuled flyers are beauties. Two of them leave Colorado points daily. Why not take a trial trip?

Inquire of nearest A. T. and S. F. agent. City ticket office in Opera House block.

EVERY ONE AGREED.

There seems to be but one opinion entertained by the good citizens of Colorado Springs and vicinity regarding railway travel to the East, North or South and that is that the Great Rock Island route is pre-eminently the best. This is the only line of railway operating solid vestibuled trains directly east from Colorado Springs to Chicago, Omaha, Kansas City, St. Louis and Ft. Worth without change and carrying the finest dining cars in the country which serve as fine meals as can be obtained in any hotel in the country. For through sleeping car arrangements to destination, lowest rates, tickets, maps, time tables, etc., call on W. W. Wood, ticket and passenger agent, 12 Pike's Peak avenue.

Be sure that your ticket reads via the Colorado Short Line of the Missouri Pacific railway, "The Scenic Line Across the Plains."

Wabash Route.

WHY TAKE THE WABASH

For St. Louis?

Because it is the shortest line, the best equipped line, runs free chair cars, buffet Pullmans, and gives you ample time in Kansas City for supper.

For Toledo or Detroit?

Because it is the shortest line, avoids transfer across the city in case you are going further east, and makes close connections with all trunk lines.

For New York or Boston?

Because it has solid through service from both Chicago and St. Louis via Niagara Falls; gives forty minutes stop at the falls at seasonable time in the morning.

For all other Eastern Points?

Because its service is uniformly good and you can make no mistake in asking for tickets via the Wabash. C. M. HAMPSON,

Burlington Route.

THE BEST LINE EAST

Is unquestionably the Burlington route. In point of equipment, time and service it is conceded to be superior to all other lines.

The fast vestibuled "flyer" leaving Denver daily at 9 p. m., reaches Chicago at 8:20 a. m. and St. Louis at 7:20 a. m., the second morning, in ample time to connect with all fast trains for the East and South.

It is also a fact worth remembering that the Burlington is the only line running through trains over its own tracks from Denver to Chicago and St. Louis, without change of any class of cars.

For full information call on J. M. Ellison, local ticket agent or address G. W. Valleny, general agent, 1039 Seventeenth street, Denver.

FAST TIME AND IMPROVED SERVICE.

Under schedules recently put into effect on the Pennsylvania lines faster time and improved service is offered travelers between Chicago and St. Louis and the East. The Keystone express which made an enviable reputation during the World's Fair period and is one of the Pennsylvanian's most popular trains, now leaves Chicago at 10:30 a. m. daily arriving Columbus 7:35 p. m., Pittsburg 1:30 a. m., Harrisburg 3:20 a. m., Baltimore 3:10 p. m., Washington 4:30 p. m., Philadelphia 12:17 noon and New York 2:30 p. m. The service on this train is strictly first class and no extra fare is charged.

From St. Louis the old favorite train No. 20, still leaves at the convenient and reasonable hour, 8:10 a. m. every day but the running time has been quickened so that this train now reaches New York 2:30 p. m. and other eastern points same time as given above for the Keystone express.

This is the fastest time ever made by a regular train between St. Louis and New York, and No. 20 is unquestionably the finest train running out of the magnificent new Union station at St. Louis. In addition to the foregoing attractions a new feature has also been added to the famous "New York and Chicago Limited" which covers the distance between Chicago and New York every day in the year in exactly 24 hours. Compartment cars of the very latest and most elaborate pattern have been built expressly for this train by the Pullman company, and are now in service. The appointments of these cars are simply perfect, and must be seen to be appreciated.

The same price is charged for single berths or sections as in the open sleeping cars and accomodations may be received in advance in the usual way. Special information can be obtained by addressing Geo. T. Hull, T. P. A., P. O. box 7, Denver.

These lines will be found printed as above, on the general official ballot

WAITE IN CHICAGO.

Waite's Sunday in Chicago was a typical Populist day. Politics took up the whole day—with incidental refreshments. There was a street procession of the Chicago anarchists, and a "silk-stocking" reception on Michigan avenue; and there was a mass meeting, where all the anarchists poured out their enthusiasm for Waite as the most distinguished leader of anarchy in the country, and somebody nominated him then and there for President on the anarchist ticket in 1896. He made one of his long harangues, in which his denunciations of capital were received with the greatest enthusiasm.

It was a memorable Sabbath for the Governor. He would like to spend all his earthly Sabbaths that way. The applause of the hoodlums and toughs of the Chicago slums was sweet to the old man, and showed him that he had not worked in vain, and that his chosen people were proud of him. If he had been Governor of Illinois when Debs's strike was on, he would have ordered out the militia to prevent anybody from interfering with his friends who were running trains off the track and burning cars. And they all know it, and that is why they prefer him even to Altgeld, whom they now regard as weak and vacillating.

It was a great stroke for Waite. It makes him the logical anarchist candidate for 1896, on the platform of no Sunday, no property, and no law.

SABBATH DESECRATION.

The spectacle of the Governor of Colorado hobnobbing with the Anarchists of Chicago in a wholesome desecration of the American Sabbath is one that ought to bring the blush of shame to the cheek of every decent man and woman of this State. It is a direct insult to the religious convictions of every person who has the misfortune to share in the disgrace which Waite has brought upon us. It is not less an insult to the decent Americans of Chicago.

Decent people who are not scrupulous in their Sunday observances have sufficient regard for the scruples of their neighbors to make their Sabbath breaking inconspicuous; Governor Waite travels a thousand miles for the sole purpose of joining in a noisy parade through the public streets accompanied with brass bands to a political mass meeting in the open air.

It is a curious commentary on human nature, that there are some well-meaning and professedly moral people who intend to vote for Governor Waite. It would be interesting to know what action of his would be sufficient to drive them from his support.

"KEEP A-MOVIN'."

The danger of Republicans this week is over-confidence. They think they have the enemy on the run, and that the election is as good as won, and there is danger that they will let up in their efforts to get out the vote, and to make as many converts as possible between now and election day.

It will not do to stop for an instant. We need in this county every vote that we can get. The Populists are claiming that some of their candidates in the county will be elected, and that the vote on Governor will be very close. Unless every Republican does his duty, their predictions may come true. There is a tremendous registration in the Cripple Creek district, and no one knows how big a plurality the Populists will get there. Every vote in this city will be needed to overcome their plurality there and give a plurality to the county Republican ticket.

So far as the State is concerned, our Republican votes are needed, not only to overcome the Populist puralities in other parts of the county, but to balance the votes of the heavy Populist counties. El Paso has been honored with a place for one of its citizens on the State ticket; and it was so honored partly because of the Republican majority which it was expected we would roll up here. Let us not disappoint our friends in other parts of the State. Let us show how we appreciate Judge Campbell by rolling up for him and his colleagues the biggest vote ever cast in the county.

Registration is over, but there is a plenty of work to be done yet. Do not miss any chance of talking to a doubtful voter. Make your arrangements to vote early on election day. Take two or three of your neighbors who will vote the Republican ticket, to the polls with you. Inform yourself exactly how to vote, so that you can do it quickly as well as correctly. In short, keep moving; and do not stop until next Tuesday night.

We reprint to-day the affidavits of two men whom Patterson relied upon for his information in regard to that conference at Cripple Creek. The usual expression at the end of an affidavit, "and further affiants say not," is more significant than usual. They say not a word of any attempt at a political bargain, which constituted the whole gist of Patterson's assertion. The columns of his own paper witness his unblushing mendacity. He asserted one thing here, another in The News on Friday, still another in The News on Saturday, a new version in The News on Sunday; and now The News of Monday comes out with these affidavits, which do not support the original allegation in any particular.

In another column will be found an explanation from President Slocum in regard to the action of the Board of Pardons, to which we would call particular attention. This board has performed a very useful service to the State in restraining Governor Waite's propensity to pardon criminals, and they ought to have the credit of it. The course of the Denver Republican in regard to the matter is controlled by a petty personal spite against Mr. Appel, who is one of the most valuable members of the board.

Tom Patterson is the champion liar of the State, and we incline to believe, of the United States. Tom Ochiltree is not in the same class with him. Machiavelli and Talleyrand would have been ashamed of his company. As for poor old Ananias, he was an infant at the business in comparison. And the feet of them that will wind him up, and carry him out, politically, are already at the door.

For all Republicans, the best way to vote is to put a cross, in ink, in the space alongside the eagle, blot it carefully, and then fold the ballot. Remember that you have to put the ballot in the box yourself and do not expect the inspector to do it for you, for that is against the law.

The first two amendments provide that cities of the first class may increase their bonded indebtedness over the present 2 per cent. limit for public and park purposes. They are not so important as the third amendment.

It is dollars to doughnuts that there will not be a truthful sentence printed in The Rocky Mountain News before next Wednesday morning.

One week from to-day will be the turning point in the history of Colorado. It is your business to help make the turn the right way.

All manner of campaign roorbacks may be expected between now and next Tuesday. Do not pay any attention to any of them.

President Slocum, and Superintendents Gove, Cornell and Coy, are for the third amendment.

The Prohibition party has thrown off its mask by endorsing the Populist candidate for Supreme Judge.

Ex-Governors Cooper, Grant and Adams are for the third amendment.

More From Father Bender.

To the Editor of The Gazette:

Father Malone in his paper of Oct. 27, '94, tried to use a fine Italian hand. Instead of proving his assertions, he asks questions, and by a very pretty counter move wishes to force me to prove my denial.

It is not true, that I am trying to divide the Catholic vote of El Paso. It is not true, that as a landlord I evicted God's poor, and had no sympathy with common people. It is not true, that I am acquainted with the bishop's political sympathies.

Regarding gold and silver mines, I wish to say, if Father Malone will obtain a written order, from the Rt. Rev. Bishop, to unseal my lips, I will speak. Father Malone's eyes do not deceive him, nor have I tried to deceive anyone. I have voted the Republican ticket and will vote it this coming 6th of November. I trust every Catholic and right-thinking voter will do likewise. On the contrary, Father Malone is throwing dust into people's eyes, deceiving them about their best interests. I return his text unused, it fits him to a nicety. On calm and considerate deliberation, it is my sincere conviction, that my former statement about Populism is true. It is also my conviction, that the course pursued by Father Malone has called forth most of this sectarian prejudice, and has thus increased the membership of the American Protective association manifold in Colorado. This society, says Archbishop Ryan of Philadelphia is not worthy of our notice. Father Malone uses it, as a bug-bear, to frighten timid Catholics, that they may become tools of his political schemes."

For Supreme Judge.

John Campbell through training, taste and habit has about him much of the student and investigator. His moral instincts turn him to the truth and right. He has thus the true judicial temperament, the mind, the knowledge and training to find what the law is, and the conscience to rightly administer it. J. Warner Mills in his intellectual make up and in his ways of life is the politician in the commonest acceptance of that term. His genius naturally impels him to the pursuit of place and pelf for himself. It has caused him to make the chase through many changes of party relations. Which of the two men is the fitter for Supreme Judge?—(Ft. Collins Express.

A Simple Reason.

Nature's nobleman, Tom Patterson, has made a wager of $250 that Waite is defeated by 10,000 plurality. Tom is working for Waite, and perhaps that is the reason he is so sure of the great landslide.—(Ft. Morgan Times.

A Populist Slander.

Mrs. Dr. Burchard Hatfield of Pueblo addressed the citizens of Rico last week in the interests of the Republican party. Her talk was so vulgar and indecent that the ladies who went with her and the ladies in the audience got up and left. The News of that town scores the Doctor unmercifully, and there have been many desertions from the Republican ranks on this account.—Victor Gold Record, (Pop.)

Chicago ever fulfils the world's fondest hopes when she has a dead square chance to prove what a lead-pipe cinch she has on winning the banner for literary supremacy. When, the other evening, Dr. A. POLITICAL POINTERS

PATTERSON THREW A BOOMERANG THURSDAY.

It Has Come Back With Terrible Force—The Pops Couldn't Hoodoo a Colored Editor The Campaign is Rapidly Closing Up—Some of the Appointments for the Week.

In another part of this paper will be found some affidavits made by Cripple Creek miners and printed in the Denver News as corroborative evidence that Republican candidates had tried to improperly influence voters. There was much comment regarding them in this city yesterday and the denunciation of Patterson was almost universal. Many persons who have really thought of voting to support what he teaches announced themselves as now ready to cast a vote against such methods. To attack honorable men in such a way and upon such flimsy material here—in their own home—and perhaps in the presence of their families and loved ones is denounced as outrageous, and men who resort to it can mean no good to the country if they succeed. The affidavits have done the business with many that months of campaigning failed to do. A gentleman from this city was in Cripple Creek on Sunday and Mr. C. E. Flynn, secretary of the union, who made one of the affidavits told him voluntarily the true story of the meeting between Mr. Howbert and the union miners.

Flynn says that he came down here to secure bail for the man Tom Short, who had worked for him. He met a good many people and was nicely treated, and he got to thinking what a bad thing it was that there should be any bad feeling between the sections. He made inquiries for Mr. Howbert and others to see if a meeting could be arranged and all differences straightened out. He had no idea of politics in it. He asked for the meeting and Mr. Howbert arranged it in Cripple Creek, as he was then stopping there. A committee of the miners met the men from Colorado Springs. They asked Mr. Howbert if he could not do something in regard to getting the bail of some of the men reduced and he replied that if there were any of them held in amounts that were excessive he had no doubt they would be reduced and that he would do what he could for them. Mr. Flynn said that politics were never mentioned, and that it was not a political meeting. He was sorry, he said, that Patterson had made such a statement, and there was no reason why it should be made.

One bright colored man cannot be bounced by the Populists. The Populist County Central committee got hold of a couple of disgruntled colored men last week, and induced them to try and get out a Populist paper. They went to Mr. A. C. Battles, who owns the Colorado Advocate, and leased of him four columns of the paper for use as a Populist organ. They went to Denver where the paper is printed, and when it came back the lessees had used the whole paper. Mr. Battles refused to let them take the paper cut in that shape, and it is lying at the Advocate office, as fine a batch of Pop. literature as you ever saw, but it was dead a borrin'. Some of the Populist leaders got hold of Mr. Battles Saturday afternoon an dtried to run a sandy on him, but it was no go, as he told them they would have to take the papers over his body. He gave back five of the ten dollars that had been paid him. He was to get the magnificent sum of $30 for allowing them to have two regular and two special editions of the paper. Mr. Battles besides owning his paper is a waiter at The Antlers, and has a home of his own, so that in Populist opinion he is a plutocrat set upon downing the poor leaders who can't get office. Once more the money power triumphs. Ha! Ha! Villian!

Mrs. Foster made a telling talk to a crowded house at Colorado City last evening. Many who came advocating Populistic principles went away convinced that Populism is not best for Colorado. It is generally conceded that Mrs. Foster is the most earnest persuasive speaker in the State. The people of Colorado Springs will have the pleasure of hearing her before the close of the campaign.

Frank Goudy spoke at Manitou last evening to a good sized audience. Today he will join Governor McIntire and they will take a special train on the Rio Grande and go to Cripple Creek over the Florence road. This afternoon they speak at Victor and this evening at Cripple Creek.

Mrs. Foster speaks at Manitou to-night and the ladies will give her a grand reception. As a speaker she has been the greatest power in this campaign.

Senator Wolcott speaks at the opera house Thursday evening. The building will not hold one-half of the people who will try to get in.

J. K. Goudy and D. F. Matchett go to Peyton for a meeting Thursday night. There is to be a picnic at Eastonville Thursday and Daddy H. Waite is to be a big gun. There is always a picnic where Davis is, but this is to be another kind. It is too bad it could not be held next Sunday so that there could be a dance and a booth for beer, but don't mention beer for Myron Reed is coming to-morrow! He refused to speak at a Pop. picnic at Florence because they had beer or didn't have enough or forgot the day of the week or something.

Republican meeting at the court house this evening. President Slocum will speak.

BOARD OF PARDONS.

President Slocum Replies to Some Adverse Criticisms.

Colorado Springs, Oct. 29, 1894.

To the Editor of The Gazette:

Dear Sir:—The statements made by your Denver correspondent in the Sunday Gazette are so false and misleading in regard to the work of the State Board of Pardons that I must ask you to give me space in your columns to correct them.

The Board of Pardons is composed of the members of the State Board of Charities and Corrections who serve on both boards, the members giving their services without salary and also, as shown by your correspondent, in some cases without any appreciation of their methods and their motives, though, I am glad to say that where their work is known it is aided and commended by the best citizens in the State. Upon the formation of the board a year ago, regular methods of procedure were established and rules laid down which should govern action in each case.

They are as follows: The secretary of the board confers with the judge before whom the case was tried and the prosecuting attorney, and if they oppose the granting of a pardon or commutation, it is not granted. A case is never considered unless it can be shown that there is new evidence or that mitigating circumstances have come to light since the sentence was imposed. Thus it will be seen that the board seeks to work only in harmony with the courts of justice and nothing could be more unjust than to attribute it with "preventing the punishment of crime," as the title of your article suggests.

I have not the figures with me, but think it would be safe to say that not one in ninety-nine of those who avail themselves of their constitutional right to apply for a pardon receive either that or a commutation of sentence, and the slightest investigation of the records would show how unwarranted and unjust is such a loose statement as that "all a convict has to do is to notify the pardon board that he is in the penitentiary and the chances are 99 to 1 that he will be pardoned."

The case of Sanford B Dill which your correspondent quotes is a good illustration of the conservative action of the board. The statement attributed to me in this article I never made, but I am glad to be able now to make some others. This man is not pardoned, but the sentence has been commuted from eight to four years. This was strongly recommended by the judge before whom the case was tried, who had himself come to the conviction that the sentence was excessive. It was also proved that the man was suffering so severely from a disease contracted by long service as a soldier in the Union army that he had only a short time to live. So careful was the board that after these facts were presented to them they deferred the case for a month that two physicians might go to the penitentiary examine into his condition and report at a late meeting.

The board does not claim infallibility, but it has tried conscientiously to work for the best good of the State and with no other motive. It has reduced the number of pardons granted to a small fraction of what they were before the board began its work, and has, with a spirit of unusual fairness, taken up cases that heretofore have been neglected. It is exceedingly discouraging if such service as has been rendered to the State by the busy men and women who compose this board is to be rewarded by such statements as these that are made by your Denver correspondent. Trusting that you will make this statement as conspicuous as the unfortunate article that appeared in your Sunday morning's issue.

I am, Very truly yours,
WILLIAM F. SLOCUM.

New Records.

Waltham, Mass., Oct. 29.—Harry C. Tyler and Arthur W. Porter continued their record-breaking feats at the Waltham track, and hardly a pleasant day passes that these two stars do not add a new record to their already long list. To-day Tyler lowered the two-mile flying start record from 4:04 4-5 to 4:04, and Porter placed Allen's time for the mile standing start in the shade by going the distance in two minutes flat. Allen's time was 2:05¼.

Tyler appeared on the track about 3 o'clock and after limbering up he gave the word for the pacemakers to go ahead. The tandems took him over the course in the following times: Quarter, 29 2-5, third 38 3-5, half 58 1-5, two-thirds 1:19 1-5, three-quarters 1:29, mile 1:59 4-5, one and one-quarter miles 2.31 1-5, one and one-third miles 2:41 1-5, one and one-half 3:01 3-5, one and two-thirds 3.21 3-5, one and three-quarters 3:31 4-5, two miles 4.04.

Poter came out and went for the mile, standing start. His time for the various distances was as follows: Quarter 33, third 41 4-5, half 1 00 3-5, two-thirds 1:19, three-quarters 1:39 2-5, mile 2.00.

A Puzzling Question.

Washington, Oct. 29. Commissioner Ruby of Baltimore is in a quandary what action he shall take as to a request preferred to him to permit Chinese seamen of the Ping Suey, now in port, to come ashore. The request has puzzled the treasury officials and the Attorney-General has been asked to solve the conundrum. Secretary Fairchild in 1887, relying upon a construction of the Chinese exclusion law as it then stood, rendered by Justice Blatchford of New York, held that Chinese seamen could land temporarily, provided they gave bond to ship for a foreign port within a reasonable time.

From Alaskan Mines.

Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 29.—Steamer Chilcat from Alaska to-day brought down 300 pounds of gold dust valued at $40,000, the result of the clean-up of the season's work by four miners on the Yukon river. Steamer Bertha, is now on the way to San Francisco with $300,000 in treasure, obtained in the same diggings. Eight hundred miners are to winter on the Yukon river this season and there is danger of scarcity of provisions.

Woman's Foreign Mission Society.

Washington, Oct. 29.—To-day's session of the twenty-fifth annual assembly of the Women's Foreign Missionary society was devoted to the discussion of the report of the committee on publications and to listening to addresses by Dr. Zancher of Baltimore and Bishop Thoburn of India.

Pueblo A. R. U. Cases.

Pueblo, Oct. 29.—The trial of W. E. Mosher, Jr., W. J. Sturgeon, G. B. Davis, N. Snyder, E. C. Robertson and S. R. Shurtz, the A. R. U. men who were charged with delaying the United States mails at the time of the great railroad strike here in July, was concluded this morning. The charge was not sustained and the men were all discharged.

Supposed Suicide.

Rock Island, Ills., Oct. 29.—M. A. Westenthal, a Chicago salesman, was found dead in his room in the Rock Island house this afternoon. It is supposed he took his own life, as an empty bottle of morphine was found on the dresser. He is said to have been despondent over financial matters.

A Steamer Disabled.

Galveston, Tex., Oct. 29.—The Mallory line steamship Nueces, which left here Oct. 24 for New York, broke her shaft on the second day out and when about 250 miles from Galveston. She is now lying off Trinity shoals, 140 miles down the coast, whither she worked her way under sail. A tug has gone to bring her to Galveston, where she will transfer her passengers to the steamship Leona.

A 10-round Draw.

Cincinnati, Oct. 29.—At the Fair Play Athletic club to-night "Kid" McCoy of St. Louis, and Al Roberts of this city, fought a draw in 10 rounds. It was a very tame affair from beginning to end, neither side showing any disposition to put up a brisk fight.

An Early Knockout.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—At McGuern's court to night Tommy West of Boston knocked out Ed. Pitts of Denver in one round.

The Pike's Peak Cog road will close for the season on Friday next. People should make the trip while there is time.

Smoke Brown Palace Perfectos.

Overdue Inventions.

We were assured that this generation should not pass away before vast social and economic changes would be brought about by harnessing nature to the chariot of progress.

All these expectations have been bitterly disappointed, and many of us feel that we are the aging victims of a heartless deception. Our appetite is still sufficiently whetted for favors to come to expunge the word "impossible" from the schedule of our desires. The question is not, What is possible? but, What is wanted?

To spend half an hour every morning and evening in dressing and bathing is a monstrous waste of time. Three hundred and sixty-five hours, and more, annually taken from man's short span of life! The first thing wanted in these days of high pressure is a soap that shall cleanse without water, remove the nascent beard without razor or apparatus and without injury to the skin.

The second is a new dress material, elastic, warm and beautiful, combining the softness of angola, the beauty of cambric, the solidity of broadcloth and the cheapness of calico, which would enable us to wear one garment and a pair of boots, instead of the round dozen, not counting the scarfpin, into which most of us have to wriggle before we can descend to breakfast. For bathing purposes water may still be retained, pending a better substitute, but the bath towel is an obsolete anachronism. There is a surgical wool which absorbs moisture with eager alacrity. We require a towel with more purpose in it. The torpid uselessness of the so called Persian towel steals a slice from every man's life. Quicker dressing, easier shaving, greater cleanliness and more absorbent towels are the first desiderata in the day. Arnold White in Cassell's Magazine.

A Hurricane In Our Southern Gulf.

Squall after squall is encountered while sailing through these gulf waters. All through the day the sun is seen at intervals, sending its glaring rays over the heaving and gurgling sea. The breeze dies out, the air is still, not a breath to disturb the motionless flags and pennants that hang straight down from their staffs. Not a cloud is to be seen in the sky, which has assumed a grayish white appearance. The experienced captain well knows the warning signs now apparent in the heavens. His manner changes from its wonted gayety to severe silence, and he who has been the most sociable and jolliest of men suddenly becomes the most anxious and taciturn. His seat at the table is vacant, and if you would find him now you must mount the bridge.

Over in the sky where the sun shone weakly a wall of gray clouds is rising slowly, almost imperceptibly. Although the air is still, a confused indistinct murmur can be heard around about the ship. The light of the sun suddenly becomes obscured, and a shadow, dark and chill, passes over the sun. A slight breath now lifts the pennant at the top of the mast, and as the temperature falls a few raindrops descend to the deck. Darker and more threatening grow the clouds until the whole sky above us is covered, save at the horizon, where the sun's yellow light still peers through long rifts in the clouds. The murmur in the air now increases to a moaning, sighing sound, and in an instant, with a rush and a roar, striking the ship and making her tremble from stem to stern, the squall is upon us. Lieutenant Preston H. Ubercroth in Blue and Gray.

A New Word and Its Derivation.

The next revised edition of Murray will contain the word "larrikin." Its significance is peculiar and its derivation amusing. A "larrikin" is an Australian tough boy or gamin. He is of the peculiar strain of depravity sure to be found in a land like Australia, the logical offspring of the convict outcasts and the women who follow in their train. He is said to have peculiarities not to be found in any other tough boy and physical characteristics which would identify him wherever found by a student of the human race. For example, the shape of his head is unmistakable. He is plentiful in Australia. He is depraved, being alike in mental and moral health. He was until lately without any individual cognomen, but not long ago one of the class was in court in Melbourne, and the Irish officer who had him in charge, being asked by the judge what his offense was, replied, "He was a larrking, yer 'onor," with such a rolling of the "r" that the judge misunderstood for a moment and thought the word was a term applied to the boy. Ever since in Melbourne the street gamin has been spoken of as a "larrikin," and the word has passed into the vernacular of Australia. Melbourne Correspondent.

Dislike Their Professions.

The almost universal disinclination of parents to bring up their children to the trades or professions they themselves follow would suggest a large number of workers in uncongenial fields. You ask a dressmaker if her daughter is likely to take to that line of work, and nine times out of ten she will answer: "I'd rather see her dead than slaving away her life as I do. No, ma'am, she won't be a dressmaker if I can help it."

And the theatrical people usually say: "We keep the children away. They seldom see a play. We don't want them to take to the stage. It's too hard a life."

The doctors seldom encourage their sons toward pills and plasters. So it goes, and I wonder if it's because what you know seems hard and everything else seems easier because you don't know. New York Recorder.

Neuralgia

ATTACKS THE EYES

Makes THE LIGHT Unbearable.

PERMANENTLY CURED BY USING

Ayer's Pills

"My husband was subject to severe attacks of neuralgia which caused him great pain and suffering. The pains were principally about his eyes, and he often had to remain in a darkened room, not being able to stand the light. Ayer's Pills being recommended, he tried them, using one before each meal. They very soon afforded relief, followed by permanent cure. I am a strong believer in the efficacy of Ayer's Pills, and would not be without them for ten times their cost."—Mrs. M. E. DEBAT, Liberty, Tex.

"I have used Ayer's Pills in my family for forty years, and regard them as the very best.—Uncle MARTIN HANCOCK, Lake City, Fla.

Colorado Springs Exchange.

Colorado Springs, ct 29—In spite of the heavy trading towards the end of last week, there seemed to be plenty left over for this, as was testified by over 40,000 shares changing hands at the first call. Of these, the principal ones to go towards this large aggregation were Mollie Gibson, Argentum J., Gold and Globe, Pharmacist, Creede and Cripple Creek and Mt. Rosa, of which the first two and the last named were very strong. Mollie Gibson sold freely throughout the call at $2.02½, but closed weaker at $1.97½ & $2.00. A. J. sold as high as $1.18, but the average figure was nearer $1.10 Mt Rosa is selling at 5¼, and there does not appear to be much of the stock on the market at this figure. Anaconda and Summit are quite weak, the latter especially so, and it changed hands as low as 11½. The call was marked with the usual activity among the brokers, which always occurs on busy days

There was again considerable activity at the second call, though trading was not so brisk as in the morning. Mollie Gibson and Argentum J. were both in good demand, and closed exactly at the same figures in the bid prices as at the first call. Mt Rosa remained as firm as ever, and sold at 5¾ Pharmacist and Gold and Globe are both suffering from a bear movement, but are in good demand at the quoted prices. Anaconda looked a little brighter, and though only 1000 were sold, there were offers on the floor for 10,000 and 20,000 at 19. Summit remains the weakest stock on the list, but it is understood that not much stock would be parted with at present prices The total sales for the day were 59,317

The separate sales for the first call were, Mollie Gibson 2000 at $2.02½; Argentum J. 1000 at $1.05, 1000 at $1.07½, 3017 at $1.10, 1000 at $1.11, 1000 at $1.11½, 600 at $1.15, 300 at $1.18; Summit 1000 at 11½; Mt. Rosa 3850 at 5, 4500 at 5¼ and 4000 at 5½, Consolidated 1000 at 1⅝; Gold and Globe 2000 at 2½ and 2000 at 4; Pharmacist 8000 at 6¼ and 1000 at 6; Creede and Cripple Creek 2000 at 1⅞ and 1000 at 1½; Portland 500 at 35¾. At the second call they were: Mollie Gibson 250 at $1.97½, 300 at $1.99, and 700 at $2.00. Argentum J. 1000 at $1.07½ and 4000 at $1.10; Anaconda 1000 at 20, Mt. Rosa 2000 at 5½; Gold and Globe 2200 at 2⅞, 1250 at 4, 1000 at 4¼ and 1000 at 4½; Isabella 1000 at 10¾; Pharmacist 1250 at 6½; Creede and Cripple Creek 1000 at 1⅞

Curb Sales.

Business among the curb brokers started out very fairly. The same stocks appear to be in demand as last week, with Aola a little, though not much, better than the 2 mark. Union is moving a little more busily, but remains at the same figure. The brokers report many stocks actively inquired after, but say that prices do not fit so that if one side or the other advances or decreases a little an active week's trading may be looked for.

The Denver Pit.

Special to The Gazette.

Denver, Oct. 29—The greatest activity was evinced among the stock brokers this morning, and started the week with a rattling good morning's trading Argentum J. and Mollie Gibson were both very strong, but the biggest jump was in Big Six, which went from 7 to 9¼. Jack Pot was very active at 2, also Mt Rosa at 4¾@5 Portland and Pharmacist were in good demand, indeed this might be said of nearly all the stocks, and the tone of the market generally was firm, the exception being Anaconda. Below are given the official sales and quotations for the call. News from the Mint.

Special to The Gazette

Denver, Oct. 29—The week's business at the mint started out with a pretty good day, the total number of ounces deposited being 894, with a value of $17,880 The heaviest deposit was by "Colorado Unknown, being two bricks weighing 735 ounces. New Mexico sent in 30 ounces of placer gold, San Miguel 30 ounces, Clear Creek 17, Nevada 62 ounces, while 19 ounces came from the Black Hills

Weekly Letter Extracts.

Messrs Doubleday, Rope & Co, in their weekly market letter, say: "Business during the past week has been very active on our exchange, and so far, has been the best which we have yet had Mollie Gibson and Argentum have both been in strong demand, owing to most favorable reports received from the properties. Considerable trading has taken place in these stocks, and buying orders are very numerous. The Portland company are doing very well. Last month they shipped from the Portland 80 car loads of ore, and from the Bobtail and Anna Lee 50 more were sent to the smelters. Their new machinery is now working satisfactorily, and it is anticipated that their output this month should be a very large one. Men who should be best posted are buying the stock. The company is now in a position to resume payment of dividends, and when ever it is decided to do so, they will no doubt be regular. We expect that in a few days our Western stocks will be dealt in on the New York exchange. Arrangements are now in negotiation for a transfer office for the same in that city. Quotations will be sent direct from our exchange each day. This plan will cause our stocks to become better known and will increase Eastern dealing in those listed on our exchange."

Current News.

Silver and the silver stocks are both climbing.

Mr. Fred F. Horn left for camp this morning to look after an interest there

Assayer Puckett of the Denver branch mint is at Cripple Creek looking after his various valuable interests.

It was another big day on 'change yesterday, with 59,317 shares sold, including nearly $13,000 worth of Argentum Juniata

There cannot be the slightest doubt but that the assured victory of the Republicans on November 6 is having lots to do with the briskness of the stock market.

The work of lowering the water in the Argentum Juniata at Aspen is progressing very rapidly and it has already reached as far as the seventh level This is authentic.

The Kentucky Belle people have received the returns on their first shipment of ore from the claim at Creede. They are, it is stated, somewhat disappointed with the result.

The Portland owners have a larger body of ore in sight at the present time than any in its history. They are shipping steadily to Pueblo and the Lawrence Reduction works.

"At the Summit they are taking out 60 tons of ore per day, which is being treated at the company's mill at Gillett. The company at present are not shipping any ore to the smelters, but are banking it

Editor Reinert of the Mining Record has just returned from the East, and it is a pleasure to note, is much improved in health. He finds the stock market much changed, the changes all being of the bullish order.

The reduction works at Lawrence are making extensive additions to the plant and will soon be able to treat a much larger quantity of ore than at present. The capacity at present is not nearly sufficient to treat all the ore received.

Some beautiful specimens of ore from the Bird lode at Cripple Creek were being shown in the city yesterday They are covered with free gold, and will run many thousands of dollars to the ton. The claim is situated between Cripple Creek and Anaconda, and is crossed by the trail between those two places It is under lease and bond to Mr. Bowers (not Frank) for $10,000

This morning the sales and quotations at the exchange will be placed by Artist Herbert on the new board for the first time. Among other improvements anticipated in the near future for the exchange is the inauguration of one or more telegraph systems direct to the floor of the house during calls. It is proposed that they shall be in direct connection with the Denver exchange and elsewhere.

A large camp of Midland Terminal railroad graders is located a mile north of Victor. The grading around Bull Hill is fast nearing completion, and the work is being pushed rapidly toward Victor. The company have begun the final survey between Victor and Cripple Creek, and grading will be begun all along the line very soon. It is the intention of the mangers to reach Victor by December 31 and Cripple Creek early in 1895.

BUSINESS PROPERTIES

An income is something that every prosperous man should provide for. Money coming in steadily, month by month, soon amounts up, and a good renting property will soon pay for itself. Good business property in Colorado Springs has held its value through the worst panic that was ever known in the country, and has proved that it is absolutely safe. There is never very much business property for sale, and we can offer as large a line as there is on the market. We have business properties at $6000, $8500, $18,000, and upward. One big bargain is a 100-foot vacant corner for $15,000. A business block erected on this corner will make the owner independent for life. We require only small payment in cash.

Good Colorado City business properties, paying 10 per cent. to 12 per cent.

THE MARKETS.

THE DECLINE IN ANTHRACITE COALERS CONTINUES.

A Large Amount of Long Stock Turned Loose on the Market—The Granger's Share in the Prevailing Depression—Wheat is Dull, but Corn Strong.

New York, Oct. 29—Money on call has been easy at 1 per cent. Prime mercantile paper 3@4 per cent. Bar silver 63¾. Sterling exchange is strong, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4 86¾@4 87 for 60 days and $4 87¼@4 87¾ for demand. Posted rates $4.88@4 89. Commercial bills $4 85¾@4 86¼. Government bonds have been higher. State bonds dull; railroad bonds weaker. Silver at the board was quiet.

Business at the stock exchange was more active, but the activity was at the expense of values. As of late the anthracite coalers were the feature of speculation, but to-day the high priced investment stocks and the Grangers received more attention. Liquidations were quite pronounced in the case of the coalers. Grangers and other issues, there having been a steady dribbling of long stock from the tin boxes throughout. For a long time past the bulls have been boasting that the efforts of the bears to dislodge long stock were unavailing and that each attack only served to increase the short interest. They can say so no longer, for to-day there was enough stock and to spare so far as the bears were concerned. The drop in the anthracite stocks was partly due to rumors that stove coal had sold as low as $3 00 per ton, against $3 85, the schedule price. Jersey Central was also affected by the statements that the net earnings for the nine months ended September 30, 1894, had decreased $1 301,965. This stock fell 1⅝ to 97½, rallied to 98, dropped to 91¾ and closed at 92. Delaware and Hudson sold down 1½ to $1.23, recovered to $1 24 and fell to $1.19¾@1 20. Lackawanna opened at $1.58, a gain of ½ per cent, broke to $1 55¼, recovered to $1 57, receded to $1 55½ and closed at $1 56. Reading was exceptionally firm at 16⅞@17¼. Judge Dallas has ratified the Olcott-Earl re-organization plan of this company.

The Grangers were depressed by the poor September statement of the Burlington and Quincy, which showed a net decrease of $395,866. A pressure of long stock was also noted in this group of stocks. In the Industrials, American Sugar was weak early in the day on the reduction of 1-16@⅛ in refined, but later the price was bid up to 86⅞ from 85⅝. Closing transactions were at 86¼.

In the final trading a fractional rally occurred and the market left off somewhat steadier in tone. Net changes show losses of ¼ to 1¾ per cent in the general list, and 1½@7⅜ per cent in the coalers. Sales were 202,700 shares.

Railway and miscellaneous bonds were weak. Transactions aggregated $1,108,000.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

A Dull Day in Wheat, but a Good Demand for Corn.

Chicago, Oct. 29—After the posting of the visible supply statement to-day what life and activity had been in the market previous to that time disappeared completely. The changes in the tone were far from being regular during the session. When trading began there was an air of indecision, the news rather favoring weakness, while the action of the corn market did not encourage short selling of wheat. This feeling of negative steadiness was displaced by one less strong, a number of liquidation sales taking place, after which there was a tendency to buy and prices very soon were on the ascent. Later in the day there was a sagging inclination, but a limitation to trade prevented a radical break. The visible supply increased 1,631,000 bushels, which was about the poular exception. There was an increase in the amount on ocean passage of 72,000 bushels. Opening Liverpool cables were weak and closing ones firm, in some instances an advance of ¼ pence being given. Continental markets were irregular. Paris was partly lower and partly higher. Berlin was unchanged. Receipts at Chicago were 162 cars and the Northwest had 1,391. Primary market receipts were 1,332,000 bushels. Export clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 370 740 bushels. Withdrawals from store were 68,031 bushels. The closing was firm with December a shade under Saturday. That option opened at 52⅝, sold between 52⅝ and 51⅝@51¾, closing at 52⅛ bid. Estimated receipts for to-morrow 200 cars.

Corn—The strength in corn was the leading feature of the grain market today. Various reasons were given for it and it is to be presumed that each had an important part in causing the advance, which was most noticeable in the near deliveries. The rainy weather, the Government supplementary report placing the yield at 1,113,000 000 bushels, the smallest crop since 1874, the steady advance at Liverpool, where stocks of American corn are exhausted and the decreasing stocks in this country—to-day's visible supply statement, showing a falling off of 610,000 bushels—each had a separate and distinct effect. The full grain did not hold because of the desire of early buyers to take profits. Corn on ocean passage increased 356,000 bushels. Receipts to-day were 180 cars, 20 under the estimate, and 250 cars are expected to-morrow.

Withdrawals from store were 72,679 bushels, and export clearances 8,155 bushels. May opened from 50¾ to 50¼, sold between 50¼ and 50½, closing at 50⅝@½ cent higher than Saturday. November closed ⅞ higher than that day, a recession of 1¼ from the top.

BECAUSE.

Sheep thrive best in a pasture infested with moles because of the better drainage of the land.

Red hair is of that color because it is supposed to have a larger proportion of sulphur than black hair.

Silver tarnishes when exposed to the light because of the actinic or chemical property possessed by the rays of the sun.

The flesh under the nails looks red because the nails are almost transparent, and thus the color of the tissue beneath is visible.

A black down grows under the feathers of many birds at the approach of winter because down, is the best nonconductor and black the warmest color.

The heaviest rains occur in the tropics because the heat and evaporation there are greatest, and the moisture ascending is suddenly condensed by the upper currents of cold air.

A closed room is bad for sleeping because air once breathed parts with a sixth of its oxygen and contains an equivalent amount of carbonic acid gas. Air breathed six times will not support life.

The snow huts of the Eskimos are the warmest dwellings that can be constructed in polar regions because snow is the poorest conductor of heat that can be found there and keeps the warmth of the fire within.

Many persons lay a poker across the top of a grate to make the fire burn because of a popular superstition, once credited, that a stubborn fire was due to the devil. Two pokers were used and were laid across the fire in the form of a cross.

Bunches of dried seaweed, window cords, crackers, tobacco and similar fibrous substances indicate the approach of rain because their fibers become soft by absorbing the moisture of the air when the atmosphere is approaching the point of saturation. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

DEFECTIVE EYESIGHT,
In youth or age, should be scientifically fitted with lenses. The rapid loss of eyesight in age can very often be traced to the neglect of the proper care of the eyes in youth, and cheap, poorly-fitted lenses. Errors of eyesight develop most rapidly during school life and should be corrected by accurately-fitted lenses, no matter what the age.
Our optical department is in charge of a SPECIALIST, in both the scientific adjustment of lenses and their manufacture, hence a perfect fit of glasses, from $1 upwards.

"So Ezry's dead at last!"

"Yes, died last night. It didn't seem possible he could ever surprise 'em in that way, they'd been lookin for it so long, but he did. They were eatin their supper in the kitchin. Left him jes' for a minit, and when they hurried back there he was gone."

Mrs. Crocker straightened her sunbonnet, drew her shawl about her shoulders and rose to depart. At the door she paused.

"What do yer suppose, Lize, that daughter of his'n'll do?"

"Matildy?"

"Yes."

"Wnal, I've thought of that, but don't seem to come to my mind consarnin her. She's so all fired queer. Perhaps it'll onsettle her."

"Do yer think she'll go to Bostin?"

"Shouldn't be a bit surprised ef she did. She's never be'n the same sence her visit there that air time."

"Likely though."

"Yes, smart's a whip."

As they turned to part each glanced curiously down the hill, where from the door knocker of a small white house a long black streamer hung in dejected folds to the stoop.

"Looks like new crape."

"Waal, it's about time. That old piece's be'n in use ever sence the year my John was born. Remember jes as well. Miss Edgcom' left off mournin for her ma and put on that sprigged muslin. Sort o' neat, but too young for her. Waal, Mr. Edgcom', he jes took her old veil, yanked out the creases and has used it ever sence for every funeral he's ever tended."

In the white house lay the corpse of Ezra Perkins. As his neighbors had gossiped, he had been left for a few minutes by his daughter and nurse, and when they returned he had passed beyond their care. The hard work, the exposure, the fever, to all of which the New England farmer becomes an early inheritor, had done their work. At 50 he had been a wornout man; at 60 he was dead.

In the spareroom the nurse, a comfortable looking, middle aged woman, was tying a black ribbon around the stem of a goblet which held a few sprays of ragged robin and young man's love, viewing her work with approval and wondering how soon she could with decency leave the house of mourning to enter her term of service at the next place, where she had seen six young Browns into the world and was ready and eager to help along the seventh.

Down stairs Matildy was putting back the disordered chairs, straightening an unruly window shade and trying vainly to end the struggles of a huge bluebottle fly that buzzed distractingly about the dusty panes. The coffin stood in the middle of the room, and now and then as she wandered about she would glance at it apprehensively, as if she feared its contents would still question and disapprove in querulous accents.

Ezra Perkins had been a stern parent and hard taskmaster. Even death could not blot that from her mind. Her thin frame, whose close fitting garment of black emphasized the stoop engendered by years of daily labor, the knotted hand and careworn face, were each mute witnesses of the bitter experience life had been to her. She had been a slave many years, but she was free at last free from the gibes and jeers, the constant supervision, the necessity for accounting for trifles, the ever overhanging dread of a daily tribunal for sins of omission and commission. There had been no love between father and daughter, but the Puritan rigidity of principle which showed each the straight path of duty to the other, and their little world gave their stern lives the empty appearance of family affection.

A little time was her own, in which she could enjoy the hard earned reward of reflection a scanty reward, but one which overworked body and tired brain had ere this denied her. Her dreams were not poetical. The drudgery of a farmhouse does not produce poets, but in the arid soil of her prosaic mind had been planted the seeds of an ambition which seemed to approach fruition.

As if it were yesterday, she recalled the one experience in her life which furnished her with these materials of future hope and present uneasiness an experience which caused her even now to be spoken of admiringly by her neighbors as "Ezry's daughter, the one who went to Boston." For them, in their monotonous existence, time was limitless, and this event, which happened when she was but 12 she was now in her thirty-fifth year was still important enough to be chronicled in daily conversation.

The circumstances of her visit were perhaps extraordinary enough to excuse the forcible impression it had made. Standing one day by the bars of the "medder," swinging her empty berry pail and digging among the briers and stones with her bare toes, she had witnessed a frightful runaway, horses and driver alike frantic with fear, and the only occupant of the carriage, an elderly lady, powerless but brave and self possessed in the face of present danger and future disaster. With unchildlike presence of mind Matildy tore off her sunbonnet and ran into the road waving it furiously before the eyes of the frightened animals. The maneuver was successful. The horses reared, pranced, then suddenly became quiet in a tremor of ungovernable rage before the weird little figure. Seizing his opportunity, the driver gained control of them with no greater damage than a bad fright. The occupant of the carriage, a wealthy woman, visiting amid the fashionable element of a neighboring summer resort, from which she had been drawn by a fit of exploring curiosity, on her return to her city home took Matildy with her to ease her mind of its unaccustomed burden of curiosity by showing the country bred child the wonders and fascinations of a luxurious existence. For weeks Matildy dwelt in dreamland, her open eyes and ears drinking in the mysteries of this new life, and receiving impressions which were destined to tinge her whole career. Then came the awakening. Her hostess, believing her debt discharged, sent her home laden with gifts and seductive promises, which proved chimerical, her identity being forgotten in a month.

Soon her life assumed a new aspect, and dreams were forced to make way for the realities of existence. Her mother's death and the subsequent burdens which fell on her shoulders took from her the gayety and life of youth, and in a few years she was a prematurely old woman, known and respected only for her common sense, industry and thrift, but restless and dissatisfied, ever cherishing the secret hope of a return some day to that paradise around which her youthful dreams centered.

Now that her desire was so near gratification she grudged every moment that passed. The fact that she had waited years only made the moments pass more slowly. As she fidgeted about the front room eying the red and yellow pattern of the gaudy carpet and the gaunt inmate of the coffin the joy that she felt at her hard won freedom was tempered by the necessary delay she must experience before availing herself of its privileges.

Her reverie was broken into by officious offers of assistance, and soon she was deep in the mysteries of planning and contriving how to seat her expected guests, how to make useful the black bombazine, which Mrs. Stoddard, who loaned it, remarked "jest wanted a hitch in the back to make it fit," and other necessary details.

CHAPTER II.

But time passed, as time will. The funeral services, in which nothing was omitted or shortened, from the interminable prayer and eulogy on the deceased to the melancholy "airth to airth," were all duly rehearsed. Then came the final preparations, the packing up, the goodbys, the tacking of the sign "To Let" on the exterior of the small house.

The last night Daniel Macquirk sauntered up to the door.

"Evenin, Matildy," he remarked.

"Evenin, Dan'el," she responded quietly.

He removed the corncob pipe from his stubbly lips. "So yer really air goin, Matildy. I didn't believe it."

Matildy turned on him fiercely. "Why didn't yer believe it?" she asked.

Daniel looked helplessly. "I dunno," he responded lamely, "but ain't it rather sudden?"

"It don't take me all my life, Dan'el, to make up my mind to do a thing," Matildy sarcastically rejoined.

This was a home thrust. For 15 years Daniel Macquirk had sauntered up every evening with his corncob pipe in his mouth and his hands in his pockets to see Matildy. She knew and he knew that he intended asking her to be his wife, but the word had never been spoken. He had needed only an encouraging glance, but her proud, obstinate nature forbade this yielding. Her New England training had taught her that it was the woman's privilege to hold back, and she had held back rigidly. Now she was glad. To be Daniel Macquirk's wife seemed as nothing in comparison with the future of which she had been dreaming.

Daniel held her hand a moment as they stood together on the stoop. "I hope you'll never regret it, Matildy," he said as the roughened palms parted.

For the first time a faint doubt assailed her and a faint premonition of coming homesickness, but only for a moment. "I'm sure I shan't, Dan'el," she answered, softened by the coming separation.

"Ef yer should ever want any help, Matildy" he began.

"I never shall, Dan'el," she interrupted quickly. "Hev I ever?" and visions of her unhelped childhood, youth and womanhood again hardened her voice.

The next day the little white house at the foot of the hill was closed.

A scanty store of money, the name of the woman who was the innocent cause of her exodus this was the capital with which she had determined to make a new start in life, never doubting that her future experience would be a repetition of the past. Her ignorance made her sanguine. The expressions of lifelong obligation and epithets of affection still lingered in her ears, as when, an excited, happy child, she had left the luxurious home where she had been for weeks the source of secret amusement and half concealed boredom.

When Matildy landed in Boston, she experienced that peculiar feeling of helplessness and bewilderment which overpowers the country bred in the presence of the bustle and noise of a great city. She stood looking helplessly about, alarmed for her safety in the midst of the incoming and outgoing trains, the hurrying crowds, the inharmonious murmur of the neighboring streets. A long time she waited; then as the momentary paralysis of thought and action passed she followed the throng of new arrivals into the street. Here a new terror assailed her. A mob of haranguing drivers yelling, "Cab, cab, cab!" surrounded her. One more enterprising than the rest seized her large carpet bag and hurried her toward his waiting vehicle. Matildy yielded to her persistent cavalier and seated herself on the comfortable cushions with a sigh of satisfaction.

"Why didn't yer believe it?" she asked.

"Where to?" the cabman asked, after waiting a reasonable time for directions.

"I want to go to Mis' Ellis'," Matildy responded.

"Come, none of that!" the man coarsely answered. "Where do you mean?"

Matildy folded her hands primly in her lap and began, "Yer see, when I left Mis' Ellis she told me that any time I was able to come, to come right back, I'd be sure of a welcome, and so I'm goin to surprise her."

The man, too practical to be touched by this childlike inexperience and faith, seized her roughly by the arm, angry, as he saw the possibility of a fare fading into nothingness. "I haven't any time," he ejaculated, "to waste. Come, get out of here!"

So Matildy was again left standing helpless and alone.

She walked up and down and finally wandered into a store, where she seated herself on one of the vacant stools. The crowds of busy shoppers passed her by, the floorwalkers and clerks looked at her curiously, but believing she was waiting for some one did not disturb her. The moments passed. Finally she got up and wandered again into the street. No one looked at her or paid her the slightest attention. A great feeling of loneliness and dread began to assail her. She mustered up courage to approach an apple stand kept by a matronly woman, whose ruddy cheeks seemed to have borrowed the roseate flush of her fruit. "Can you tell me," she hazarded timidly, "where Mis' Ellis lives?"

The woman, busily rubbing her apples, looked at her curiously.

"Bless my soul! I don't know any Miss Ellis. I guess you've made a mistake." Then, with the quickness of her class, used to all the sights and scenes of a great city, she took in the situation.

"You're from the country, I guess?"

Matildy nodded.

Thoughts of her own country bred childhood prompted her to offer Matildy a seat and an apple while she listened to her story. When it was finished, she saw her duty stretch plainly before her. In her simple life she had no time or place for moral wanderings or splitting of hairs. Things were either right or wrong. This woman had come to her friendless and inexperienced. She must do what she could to assist her.

This she found to be considerable. It consisted in her taking her protege home, and, after finding the addresses of all the Ellises that the directory afforded, in her spare moments going with Matildy to each house where it seemed possible her former protectress might reside. This took many days and resulted in disappointment and failure. The old lady who had unconsciously played such an important part in Matildy Perkins' life had long since died, her house had passed into the possession of distant relatives, who were too absorbed in the round of fashion to feel more than a passing interest in the quaint story and its quaint teller.

Then came a long season of trial for Matildy. Too proud to return to her village home, she daily fought the battle of homesickness amid her strange surroundings. The old apple woman was her only solace, and she alone was a witness of the gradual disappearance of the little hoard of money, the inaptitude for a city life, the pathetic longing and homesickness Matildy tried so bravely to hide.

CHAPTER III.

A few months elapsed; then the white house at the foot of the hill was reopened Matildy Perkins had returned.

Once more she resumed her forfeited position, took charge of Dorcas meetings and quilting bees and became as before the advisor and confidante of young and old. If there was an added line of anxiety or despair on her countenance, no one noticed it, so profuse had nature been in that respect. There was a stern dignity in her bearing which prevented the officious inquiries of her neighbors from being too closely pursued. That she had failed was evident, but the details of her failure, the long dreary days among a people who seemed an alien tribe, so different were they from the bright remembrances of her childhood and her own personality. The little stuffy room and the ill cooked food, which was all her meager capital could furnish, the sense of bewilderment which never forsook her day or night, the shock she had received at the news of the death of her benefactress, and, above all, the longing for her village home, where every face was familiar and friendly all this was locked securely in her own breast.

Little time, however, was left her for lamenting. The realities of existence faced her. The little farm, which in her father's lifetime had furnished them by his unceasing efforts with a scanty sustenance, now lay barren and unproductive. The only thing she could do was to dispose of the land at a sacrifice, which she did, and with the meager sum obtained lived on frugally while she weighed plan after plan for earning her daily bread To go about from house to house sewing, nursing, etc., was repugnant to her. She hated to place herself in a position of dependence to those who were her inferiors, but she must live, and day after day she sat with hands stiffly clasped waiting for inspiration.

One morning, with a smile of satisfaction, she hung a huge square of white pasteboard outside her front room window. On it was printed in legible characters:

OPINIONS BY MATILDY
PERKINS.
10 cents.

Soon after an excited group of neighbors gathered on Mrs. Stoddard's front doorstep to discuss its advent. After a season of fruitless conjecture Mrs. Stoddard volunteered to investigate in person.

"She'll never tell yer," hazarded one skeptic. "Yer know she's so sort o' queer about tellin things."

"Waal, I guess," said Mrs. Stoddard aggressively, "thet I ain't skeered at a 'no,' an, what's more, I don't believe she'll be so all fired mean as to hang that air sign out and then refuse to explain its meanin."

Accordingly Mrs. Stoddard hurried down to the foot of the hill and rapped at Matildy's door. Matildy, having seen the conclave, knew that the moment of explanation had come.

Her air of dignity and laconic "Mornin, Miss Stoddard," rather awed her interlocutor, but the thought of the party she represented moved her to a new trial. After a little pause she commenced, "I thought I'd like to know, Matildy, what thet air sign means?" pointing as she spoke to the flapping pasteboard. Matildy's thin lips tightened, then unclosed abruptly. "I've come to the conclusion, Miss Stoddard," she said, "thet of my opinions is wuth askin for they're wuth a-payin for. Ten cents won't break no bones, an you know as well as I know thet for years of anybody's got inter any muss or mess they've jes put on his'n or her hat or bonnet an ran right over to me, an I've done by 'em to the best of my ability. Now times is changed. I've got to get my bread an butter, an I guess thet's as good a way's any. Leastwise I'm goin to try it, an ef yer ever want my advice you can get it for 10 cents."

Mrs. Stoddard was staggered for a moment by this harangue, but recovered rapidly.

"Do yer mean to say, Matildy Perkins, thet ef a neighbor came in to ask yer for a little friendly advice thet ye'd charge fur it?"

"Thet's jes' what I mean, Miss Stoddard. Ef I ask anybody fur anything, I expect to pay 'em fur it, an thet's what I want done ter me."

Mrs Stoddard took her way back with excited talk and gesture. "I s'pose thet's what she learned in Bostin," she added after the dialogue had been duly rehearsed "I've heerd said thet yer see an hear strange sort o' things there, an I guess it's so ef that's a sample."

"She'll wait a long time before she'll get my money," said another.

"Mine neither," was ejaculated on all sides.

For days nothing was spoken of over hoe and rake and across currant bushes and dilapidated rails but Matildy Perkins' opinions. For days Matildy sat in her scantily furnished sitting room waiting for possible customers who never came, they being for the most part engaged in querulous dissertations upon her rapacity and egotism.

Suddenly one night Johnny Brown was taken with the croup. Matildy was near at hand, the doctor far, and Matildy had already brought him through the measles and whooping cough. Mrs. Brown hesitated but a moment. She had been Matildy's most bitter opponent in this new venture, but motherly love carried the day, and Matildy was summoned.

Thus the first step was taken, and the rest was easy. Soon after Johnny's convalescence came preserves and pickling time, and her recipes were in constant requisition. Then came the question of winter cloaks and hats. Her taste was constantly required. She had been to "Bostin." That, in her neighbors' eyes, was the open sesame to all knowledge and all experience.

Matildy's thin lips tightened.

Pretty soon it became evident in the village that nothing could be done without the sanction of Matildy's opinions. Best rooms were furnished, children doctored, Dorcas societies planned, carried on and entertained under her supervision. It was so much easier when a difficulty presented itself to take the requisite 10 cents or its equivalent in "garden sass" to Matildy's and have the question settled decisively than to oscillate hour after hour on the horns of a dilemma.

Matildy bore her honors meekly. The failure of her life's ambition had been great enough to lessen all subsequent successes. She realized and appreciated the trust that was reposed in her and never took an undue advantage of her position.

CHAPTER IV.

No priest of the Roman Catholic faith, restrained by the vows of silence which protect the confessional, could have more zealously guarded the secrets entrusted to him than did Matildy. Many a time she was perplexed by the inquiries of her customers, but her native wit and shrewdness stood her in good stead, while her natural sympathy and practical experience made up all deficiencies. An answer was always ready, though no one but herself knew how wide from the mark she often came or how much more easily the question might have been settled without her assistance. Her two visits to Boston, the experience and knowledge of life she was supposed to have acquired and the mystery surrounding her reappearance in the village were the foundations of her success.

In her sitting room hung a motto outlined and worked with care by her busy fingers. The glazed white surface formed a striking background to the neat black text, irregular in form, but showing extreme care in the precise details of the work. "Semper Paratus". "It's Latin, yer know," she explained to her curious visitors, "an it means, 'Always here.' Nobody talks thet language now. Yer only see it in copy books an in the city stores." "The city" was always pronounced with a slight elevation of the head, at which her audience was always duly impressed.

This slight addition to her furniture greatly increased the reputation she had already secured for progress and the adoption of new ideas.

By and by her fame spread. Visitors came from neighboring towns to see the quaint woman whose originality piqued their curiosity and oftimes, half in jest, half in earnest, would ask her opinion in love matters or other equally important topics. Little by little she bought back the land she had been forced to dispose of, hired an indigent neighbor to look after her farm with his own and commenced to lay by for a possible rainy day.

In spite of her success, however, she was not happy. She was alone in the world, without kith or kin, her present unenlightened by the domestic joys so dear to the feminine heart, her future uncertain. At any moment a new prophet might arise and dispossess her.

Her fear was born of humility. Scarcely a household in the village but regarded her with affection and gratitude, scarcely a family but owed her what money could not repay. Sickness, sorrow and disgrace were all brought to her and relieved by her womanly care.

Across the meadow which separated the two farms was the home of Daniel Macquirk. He had never visited her since the eve of her new departure. He had resented her independence and spirit, had sneered unfeelingly at her pasteboard sign and been exasperated at her success. He had even in the bitterness of his scorn printed a sign, which on second thoughts had been destroyed, stating that Daniel Macquirk's opinions could be obtained free. He never omitted an opportunity of ridiculing her and was angered that his ridicule only acted as an incentive to the faith of the credulous.

Of his animosity Matildy was not ignorant, but for a time she treated it as the necessary accompaniment of success. By and by she attempted to soften his unreasonable displeasure, all to no purpose. Finally she recognized the futility of her efforts, and irritated by her failure assumed a like demeanor. Many a bitter word was spoken back and forth until at last they eyed each other hostilely and passed by without uttering a syllable of greeting.

Like her, he was alone in the world, a hardworking New England farmer, with the bitter prejudices and deep feelings of his class. In their hearts they would like the old relations to be restored, so like were they in loneliness, so near in situation.

After her father's death he had braced himself to the point of asking her to be his wife, but the coldness of his reception and the preparations for departure showed him conclusively how little thought she had given to the matter so important to him

The busy days glided by, grew into weeks, months and even years. The village life moved on in its monotonous round of petty pleasures and petty pursuits. The old died, the young married, the children were born, but through all her opinions on matters social and domestic were still called for and still paid for. Each year brought an additional wrinkle to her forehead and an additional debt of gratitude and respect to her exacting neighbors.

All at once rumors became rife that she was to be married. The man for whose sake gossip pronounced her ready and willing to make the necessary sacrifice after years of solitary existence was Deacon Smith, a widower, whose deceased wife, dead one long year, had left him the care of six small children and a household disorganized and disordered. A decent season of mourning having elapsed, his intentions of seeking a successor were soon apparent. No one answered his requirements so well as Matildy, and from suggestions and hints the report was soon widespread. The match was a suitable one, and Deacon Smith was not averse to its consummation. He realized Matildy's fitness for the position and considered he was offering her no mean equivalent for her future advice and companionship.

His visits to her, urged forward by the interest of his neighbors, who seemed to consider that by promoting this marriage they were paying off their own long arrears of indebtedness, and his own predilections, were many in number and suggestive in detail. Matildy was not ignorant of the object of his attentions, but with her accustomed shrewdness and ingenuity managed to prevent his coming to the point until she had satisfactorily settled in her own mind whether it would be worth while for the sake of having her future decided to exchange a life of freedom for that of stepmother to the six young Smiths. The question was a hard one to settle; it presented so many aspects, was bristling with so many pros and cons. So Deacon Smith's anticipator visits were many in number.

Rumors of her probable consent were wafted to Daniel Macquirk's ears and caused him many an unpleasant quarter of an hour as he meditatively smoked his pipe after the evening chores were finished and nothing interfered with the long retrospect of memory.

One night Matildy, having escorted Deacon Smith to the front door as usual, stood meditatively on the stoop, lamp in hand, the yellow rays throwing into

A THEATRICAL REVIEW

Hoyt's "A Milk White Flag" Scores a Big Hit

GILLETT'S MUSIC IS ALSO GOOD.

[illegible] Special Correspondence of the Gazette.

[illegible] Hoyt [illegible] "A Milk White Flag" [illegible] Grand Opera House [illegible] Gillett's Music Is Also Good. [illegible]

[illegible] Hoyt [illegible] "A Trip to Chinatown" in New York, for it is as much better than it as [illegible] is than cheese. It is more [illegible] too. Even the worst critics vote to keep it. It is an exemplification of a fundamental [illegible] the play that it is [illegible] with [illegible]. It is as follows:

The Colonel, Christian Bevan; the Major, Paul Barnes; the Judge Advocate, Howland Hooper; the Surgeon, Mark Tremby; the Bandmaster, Steele Ayres; the Private, Willing Singh; the Dancing Master, Gideon Foote; the Lieutenant, Phil Graves; the Standard Bearer, Carlie Hayes; the General, Hurley Burleigh; the Dear Departed, Piggott Love; the Orphan, Pody Love; the Particular Friend of the Deserted Wife, "Ike" Douglas; the Deserted, Antonia Love.

"A Milk White Flag" satirizes a national weakness which may well be ridiculed. It is the tendency to put on a uniform whenever there is the slightest excuse for it and strut around like a turkey gobbler. Mr. Hoyt's shafts of wit, while aimed directly at the national guard, will be accepted in a much broader sense perhaps than even the author intended. The story is quite simple, most of the fun being made by the dialogue, which sparkles and effervesces continuously. The first act passes in the armory of the Pensacola guards, when General Burleigh of the regular army is the guest of honor. The colonel was elected to his office simply because he closely resembles the late Napoleon. A rival military organization has just had a military funeral, and the Pensacolas exceedingly jealous, resolve not to be outdone.

In act 2 a pay roller who has arrived with an order etc. to [illegible] a church in order to collect an insurance of $100,000 is brought home and supposed to be dead. He is posted on the customs odd, has the phrase ready stating the Panama officer [illegible] taking love to his wife and finally [illegible] expense will him for $62.50 to enable the guards to have a military funeral. In the third act the corpse announces that he is not dead when a proposition is made to outdo the rival organization, who simply buried their man, by cremating him.

The farce is a huge success, and there is not a dull or a coarse moment in it anywhere. It is made so by the most spectacular by the introduction of [illegible] female impersonators "boys," vicandiers, etc. The original music, which was composed by that skillful constructor of whistleable melodies, Percy Gaunt, is catchy and will undoubtedly become popular and thus work its way into the home circle.

A person who has just returned from Europe, and who is a great friend of the peerless Adelina Patti, tells me that it is not improbable that the diva will pay America another professional visit next year. While Patti had not stated specifically that she would do so, the impression made upon her friend was that the only stumbling blocks would be a competent manager and a guarantee that her salary would be paid. Patti has reached the age when long railroad journeys are exceedingly distasteful as well as wearying to her, and she declares with emphasis that she would not undertake a tour like her last one for all the wealth of the Indies. She complains, too, of the lack of arrangements for keeping drafts from her in the theaters at which she sang.

A great many persons imagine that Patti is unduly fussy and that her demands are frequently and, in fact, usually unreasonable, but when it is considered that the condition of a few vocal chords means a large fortune each year it will be admitted that she is justified in being as careful as possible of her health. During the present season Patti is making more money than ever before in her career. She has engagements in all of the European capitals and in most of the important cities. Besides these she has been obliged to refuse offers which would have startled either of those two worshipers of the golden calf, Jenny Lind and Christine Nilsson. Most critics declare that her voice is as good as ever, and a few extremists who allow their admiration for the artist to run away with their judgment, foolishly insist that Patti can sing better than ever. The absurdity of the latter assertion is manifest, but the fact remains that the [illegible] of the diva's voice [illegible] remarkably little [illegible] years. [illegible] Patti [illegible] Nicolini [illegible] Castle [illegible] Swansea [illegible] Craig-y-Nos [illegible] and was but [illegible] short [illegible] Patti [illegible] but a few days [illegible] she is a prime favorite with [illegible] which never [illegible] to [illegible] occurrence [illegible] in order to [illegible] the [illegible] of her [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] It should be clear to any one that if Patti did not care for visitors she would not have the [illegible]. As she is a well read woman and especially well posted on [illegible] she certainly would not invite people to her castle simply for the purpose of boring them. Besides, as no one but an [illegible] could be entertained such visitors with authority, they are manifestly an [illegible] of confidence.

Never was the force of Shakespeare's dictum, "Use every thing the things" more vividly exemplified than by the experience of Jim Murphy, George Richards and Eugene Canfield. These three men have for years been [illegible] Value Construction Hoyt's companies. Murphy gave an impersonation of Maverick Brander in "A Texas Steer" which was a clever one as it was comic, and, although the character is not cast upon a high plane, artistic in the extreme.

Richards and Canfield did [illegible] work in several of Hoyt's skits, the former being exceptionally droll particularly in "A Temperance Town." All three of these men were [illegible] attacked by the dramatic fever, and they determined to make for the stage the fortune which they had been piling into Hoyt's coffers. Their abilities would then have the opportunity to shine with [illegible] effulgence, and their bank accounts would especially wax plethoric.

Richards and Canfield had a "bobble" entitled "A Classic Chorus" specially written for them, while Murphy and Hengler of Guy Carleton's [illegible] "Lo Kendale." The "Chorus" has closed its season, and its stars have joined Murphy. Nearly all the storm has run out of the "Kettle" and the three ex-Hoyt stars are announced to produce a new play within a short time. They are all positively convinced by this time that what they [illegible] was in the play but even when [illegible] was the opinion that the play and by [illegible] not the actor is the thing.

The theatrical novelty of the week is the appearance in A. W. Gattie's drama, "The Transgressor," of Miss Olga Nethersole, who has been extensively heralded as the "English Bernhardt." Her American debut was made at Palmer's theater. Mr. Gattie's play is a plea for permitting the remarriage of a person who is united in wedlock to one who has been declared hopelessly and incurably insane. Eric Langley's wife, who is in this condition at the opening of the play, is an inmate of a private lunatic asylum. Eric has fallen in love with Sylvia Woodville, who, being ignorant of his wife's condition, consents to a private marriage. Sylvia rather rebels against the secrecy, but Eric does not dare reveal to his friends the real state of affairs. He finally, however confesses to an intimate, Sir Thomas Horn Iffe, and is overheard by Rev. Hen. Mordin who is a rejected suitor for Miss Woodville's hand.

MISS NETHERSOLE IN "THE TRANSGRESSOR"

The minister proceeds himself that it is his duty to inform Colonel Foster, the young lady's uncle, who in turn, tells the [illegible] of the play occurs between Miss Woodville and Eric.

Miss Woodville, however, finally forgives her husband and announces her intention to stick to him through [illegible] and thin, and the audience begins to wonder how the playwright will [illegible] to extricate the characters from the apparently hopeless tangle into which he has put them. [illegible] talking [illegible] it does the [illegible] wife does and [illegible] well.
